U.S. STANDS VIGIL

Ginzburg, Shcharansky Trials Open

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet human rights activists Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg today went on trial 100 miles apart and each boldly proclaimed his innocence.

U.S. embassy officials, who were refused admittance to both trials, stood vigil outside each courtroom as a token of the serious concern the trials have aroused in the United States.

Shcharansky, a 30-year-old computer expert faces a possible death sentence on charges of spying for the United States — a charge personally denied by President Carter.

His brother, Leonid, reported Shcharansky told a Moscow court, "I cannot acknowledge any guilt. I consider the charges absurd."

Ginzburg, 41, and a founding father of modern Soviet dissent who has already spent seven years in prison, heard the charges of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda brought against him and emphatically denied any guilt.

When the court at Kaluga, 110 miles southwest of Moscow, routinely asked Ginzburg his nationality he replied, "Prisoner."

Leonid Shcharansky emerged from the People's Court of Moscow's Proletarsky District and said his brother had taken 17 months of solitary confinement very well indeed.

"He looked good and was self-confident," Leonid said.

Shcharansky pulled out a photograph of his exiled wife Avital, flashed it at his brother and smiled broadly.

Mrs. Irina Ginzburg came out of the Kaluga courtroom during a midday break and told reporters that 16 months in Kaluga Prison had made an old man of her husband.

"He feels and looks terrible," Mrs. Ginzburg said, adding, "He has gone completely gray-haired and looks like a 60-year-old."

Shcharansky immediately dismissed his court-appointed and KGB-cleared defence attorney, Silva Dubrovskaya, and told the court he would handle his own defence.

No Relief In Sight For Beer

The brewery shutdown in B.C. entered its second month during the weekend with no sign of a resumption of talks.

John Langley, business agent for the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers, said the union will continue with flying picket squads this week to prevent beer being shipped from the picketed breweries.

The pickets will follow trucks suspected of transporting beer from the plants.

Bob Binnendyk, vice-president and general manager of Labatt Brewery in B.C., said charges that beer is being shipped out of the shut down breweries were not true.

The lockout at five B.C. breweries — three in Greater Vancouver, one in Victoria and one in Creston — began June 8 after union workers at Carlings in Vancouver went on strike May 26.

The lockout affects 1,200 brewery workers, while hotels and neighbourhood pubs have laid off staff because of the beer shortage.

A New Computer You Can Talk To

NEW YORK (UPI) — Computer terminals which will respond to oral rather than written commands will be on the market in the United States next year, says a New York science research firm.

The first such system, called a speech recognition machine, is about to be installed for a commercial customer by Japan's NCE Corp., says Quantum Science Corp. It can recognize a spoken vocabulary of about 120 words.

Quantum Science, a multinational technological consulting firm based in New York, expects similar machines with recognition vocabularies of 50 words probably will be on the market next year in the United States priced to sell for $4,000 to $5,000.

A Quantum spokesman noted that the size of the initial vocabulary is not the most important index of a machine's value or quality; other considerattions may be more important.

A study by Quantum, one of a series of 10 the firm is producing on hardware of the future, concluded the long-term trend in man-machine communication will be to accommodate human rather than machine characteristics. Therefore, speech processing — speaker verification, speech recognition, speech synthesis — will be among the most significant new fields in information processing in the 1980s.

The speech processing computer terminals will save time in many businesses, Quantum said. They will be particularly valuable in aircraft traffic control.

BOMB THREAT EVACUATES THOUSANDS

NEW YORK (AP) — A man threatening to detonate what he said was 80 pounds of dynamite with a hand grenade and claiming to speak only Polish was holding four persons hostage in the World Trade Centre today, authorities said.

A police hostage negotiating team were talking to the man by telephone through a Polish interpreter, a spokesman said.

Times News Services

CHICAGO — Nazi leader Frank Collin stood atop a white van and spoke passionately of a "1978 white revolution" in which he said Jews and blacks would be "wiped off the face of the earth." There was no applause.

Collin, who denies the Jewishness of his own father, strutted on the top of the van and shouted to the crowd:

"I can't believe there was a holocaust. But if there was, they (Jews) deserved it. Just as they're going to deserve it this time."

Michael Allen, the leader of the National Socialist Party of America in St. Louis, spelled it out.

Of the Nazi massacre of Jews in Europe, he said, "This time we're going to finish the job."

Police say about 4,000 persons were looking on as Collin gave his "White Victory" speech.

Hundreds of policemen separated about 20 brown-uniformed Nazis and small bands of counter-demonstrators, whose shouts of "Death to Nazis" at times made it impossible to hear Collin.

Collin said there was a "minimum of violence" at Sunday's rally that left 62 persons arrested and seven injured. He said he wished police had stayed away so that Nazi supporters could have attacked the counter-demonstrators.

About 2,000 people were in the park and 3,000 others — mostly counter-demonstrators — were reported by police in the area. Most of those listening to Collin apeared to be on his side, but there was a strident group that attempted to drown out the Nazi speeches.

When it was over, bare-chested youths in the park seemed to want more and milled about for almost an hour in the muggy, 30-degree heat. A group of people wearing Jewish skull caps was chased until police came to their rescue. One of the few black youths venturing into the park was beaten. His clothes were torn from him before police could reach him.

Trading insults largely made up for breaking heads. Youths shook their fists in the faces of Jewish death camp survivors who gathered in the park. The

Sadat Plan Rejected

Times News Services

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat expressed "keen disappointment" today over Israel's rejection of the latest Egyptian peace proposals for the Middle East.

He was quoted by Egyptian journalists as saying he feared the Israeli rejection could affect the outcome of next week's Israeli-Egyptian-U.S. foreign ministers' meeting in London.

Sadat spoke with a group of Egyptian reporters in his Vienna hotel suite following two meetings here Sunday with Israeli Opposition Labor Party leader Shimon Peres.

The Israeli cabinet agreed Sunday to send Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan to London but said Egyptian proposals made last week were "unacceptable to Israel and cannot, by their essence, lead to the achievement of peace in the Middle East."

At the meeting with Peres, Sadat said he would set aside the peace plan, if the Israelis were willing to discuss principles rather than details at next week's meeting, according to a spokesman for Peres.

The official agenda is to consist of the Egyptian peace plan and an Israeli plan that Egypt vetoed last December.

Peres' spokesman, Yossi Beilin, did not specify how far Sadat would be willing to let the Egyptian delegation depart from his proposals in London.

Sadat told a news conference before he met with Peres that a "dangerous situation" might arise if the London talks fail.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, following the five-hour cabinet session Sunday, said that Sadat's peace proposals, which call for Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, "cannot by their nature lead to the establishment of peace."

Cabinet Secretary Aryeh Naor said the ministers deliberately avoided a formal rejection of the Sadat plan and decided instead to brand it as "unacceptable" in order to assure that peace negotiations broken off last January could resume in London. Naor said the cabinet hoped that the foreign ministers' conference could start in a "positive mood."

Bloodless Mauritania Coup

RABAT (UPI) — Left-leaning military officers seized power today in Mauritania and arrested President Moktar Ould Daddah in a bloodless coup that could have a major impact on the three-year guerrilla war in the former Spanish Sahara.

The military junta, which called itself the "Committee for National Rehabilitation," suspended the constitution and dissolved the 15-man cabinet, the parliament and the ruling People's Party, a radio communique monitored in neighboring Morocco said.

The junta said Ould Daddah's regime was toppled to "put an end to the anti-national and anti-popular corruption" of his government.

The statement was taken here as meaning the junta would be prepared to patch up relations with Algeria, which has been arming and training Polisario Front insurgents in Mauritania's and Morocco's mineral-rich portions of the Sahara desert.

Diplomats in Rabat said they had received reports indicating the junta was composed of left-leaning military officers resentful of the large influence held over their poor but strategic country by France and Morocco.

One Firm Won't Pay 97% Boost In Taxes

SURREY (CP) — A foundry business here is withholding about $15,000 in municipal taxes because it claims its taxes increased over 97 per cent this year under the new Assessment Amendment Act.

Sheila Barr, president of Robar Industries, said she sent letters to both Premier Bill Bennett and Mayor Bill Vogel in June stating she did not understand the increase in her taxes to $40,574 this year from $20,738 in 1977.

Barr said she has sent the municipality a cheque for the amount of her 1977 taxes plus an additional 20 per cent which, said Barr, is about $15,000 less than her assessment.

Barr said that since the road leading to her foundry is not paved and the company looks after its own garbage removal and pays for its own water supply, she saw no reason to pay the entire increase.

Municipal manager Dan Closkey said the increases to industry were high this year because a change in the assessment base resulted in industries being assessed at 30 per cent of their full value. He said also that many industries were under-assessed in the past.

RANSOM DEMANDS 'IMPOSSIBLE'

CAGLIARI, Sardinia (UPI) — An angry father has taken out an ad in two Sardinian newspapers telling the kidnappers of his son that their ransom demand is impossible to meet.

"My son is obviously worth a great deal to me, as yours are to you, but I will never be able to have him back if you persist in your absurd demands," wrote Franco Locci, whose 7-year-old son Luca was abducted June 24.

Luca's kidnappers asked $3.5 million for his release.

Locci told the bandits that if they pressed their demands, "I won't get my son back and you won't reap the fruits of your actions."

Sword and Sorcery at Sci-Fi Gathering

By JOSEPH McLELLAN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — You could tell right away that it was not one of your run-of-the-mill Washington conventions — particularly when you began reading the buttons (Dragonriders Have More Fun; Take a Wookie to Lunch Today; Darth Vader Is a Paramount Executive).

Or when you noticed the costumes — men in long, red-lined capes and bearing the sorcerer's staves; others in chain mail with swords four-feet long — some with extra-large handles because you needed both hands to swing them.

And one very husky fellow dressed like a medieval peasant, carrying a dangerous-looking battle-ax over one shoulder and, perched on his wrist, a no-kidding real, live falcon that surveyed the scene cooly, looking slightly bored.

The falcon seemed to be the only one with that attitude. Of the 1,202 humanoids who registered for Unicon IV, the three-day gathering that ended Sunday in suburban Maryland, some showed signs of hyperactivity, and as the weekend raced along a lot showed extreme fatigue. But there was no time for boredom.

They were too busy playing games with computers, admiring the science-fiction costumes of the more adventurous participants, watching films that ranged from Masque of the Red Death to Farenheit 451, pointing ray guns at one another and getting autographs from their favorite science-fiction authors.

Unicon (the name truncates and blends "university" and "convention") began four years ago as a small gathering of science-fiction fans at the University of Maryland and has been growing at what science-fiction fans would call an exponential rate. The first Unicon had 200 in attendance. Last year, after moving off the campus, it had 550 and this year that figure was more than doubled.

Part of the reason for this sudden growth could be seen in some of the costumes that, improbable as it once would have seemed, almost any American today would recognize: Darth Vader, Princess Leia and Chewbacca the Wookie, all from Star Wars — not to mention one of those little people in brown-hooded cloaks with luminous eyes who trundled around the desert peddling secondhand androids. Ginzburg, Shcharansky Trials Open

The formal indictment of Shcharansky alleges that he "betrayed the motherland" by delivering state secrets to foreign intelligence services.

President Carter personally has denied that Shcharansky ever worked for the CIA — one of the allegations against him — and American officials have warned repeatedly that harsh sentences against the two could damage U.S.-Soviet relations.

Soviet authorities allowed Shcharansky's brother Leonid into his trial and Ginzburg's wife, Irina, and mother, Lyudmila, were allowed to attend his trial. But police guards barred dissident friends and Western diplomats and reporters at both trials.

U.S. embassy officials were turned back at both courthouses when they asked to be admitted as observers.

Meanwhile, Soviet authorities announced the opening of a third and more mysterious trial in Moscow.

In a terse announcement the official Soviet news agency Tass reported that a Soviet citizen, identified only as A. Filatov, had gone on trial before a military court on charges of high treason by espionage.

Filatov's name had not been previously mentioned in the Soviet press — and was not known to Western embassies and news agencies or to the Moscow dissident community.

Soviet police ringed the dingy yellow stucco three-story courtroom in Moscow's Proletarsky District along the Moscow River where Shcharansky was being tried.

However, selected members of the public who produced green invitation cards were allowed through the steel barricades and police lines.

A Moscow court spokesman told reporters, "Shcharansky is charged with having betrayed the motherland and having damaged Soviet power in the period 1975-1977 by keeping regular contacts with representatives of foreign intelligence and following their wishes in providing state secrets.

"Shcharansky provided several locations of defence interest that were secret to Western diplomats and to some people who worked in Moscow under the guise of journalists," the spokesman said.

He said Shcharansky was also charged with spreading anti-Soviet propaganda.

Ginzburg was formally accused of using funds sent from abroad to support criminals — a reference to his work as administrator of a charity fund established by exiled author Alexander Solzhenitsyn to help political prisoners and their families — and with circulating documents denouncing the Soviet government and social system for human rights violations.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Ginzburg agreed with the facts but denied that his actions were anti-Soviet and refused to plead guilty.

Nobel prizewinner and leading Moscow activist Andrei Sakharov journeyed to Kaluga in hopes to attending the trial of his friend Ginzburg, while Sakharov's wife Yelena stood vigil outside the Moscow courthouse where Shcharansky was being tried.

If the trials follow the pattern of similar trials in the past, verdicts can be expected within four or five days.

Shcharanksy was arrested in February 1977 and Ginzburg was taken into custody the following month. Both arrests came shortly after President Carter outlined his policy of a vigorous American defence of human rights throughout the world.

The Soviets scheduled the trials just two days before the start of a new round of strategic arms limitation talks in Geneva between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Curtis Weighs Transit Reform

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis says his ministry will be taking a serious look at instituting a staggered transit fare system for B.C.

Curtis said in an interview following a recently-concluded trip to Europe he took to study transit systems that a staggered system might include weekly or monthly passes and lower fares for off-peak hours.

The minister said after the study is complete he will be able to make decisions on the direction transit will take in the province under the government's new Urban Transit Authority Act.

Curtis said there is one thing he found in his European trip that doesn't need more study to verify — that light rapid transit (LRT) is not all it is cracked up to be.

"There is a mythology in B.C. which suggests LRT is the answer to all our public transit needs."

BOMB BLAST IN PROTEST

Times News Services

A small bomb exploded today near a Soviet tourist office in Rockefeller Center, apparently as a protest against the trial of Jewish dissidents in the Soviet Union. There were no injuries.

The blast occurred about 6:30 a.m. PDT in a stairwell on the eighth floor of 45 Rockefeller Plaza. Another suspected explosive device was found on the ninth floor and police ordered both floors evacuated.

Shortly after the explosion, a man called United Press International and claimed the bomb was the work of the Jewish Armed Resistance, a splinter group of the militant Jewish Defense League.

In Toronto, meanwhile relatives of Anatoly Scharansky sent a telegram to Soviet leader Leonid Brehznev on Sunday pleading for the release of the Soviet dissident on the eve of his trial in Moscow.

Mrs. Scharansky has 40 cousins living in Toronto, a family spokesman said.

And in London a British politician says Western democracies should consider boycotting the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow because of the Soviet Union's trials of dissidents.

Rhodes Boyson, the Opposition Conservative Party's spokesman on education, said in a letter to Home Secretary Merlyn Rees that he hopes the Labor government "will vigorously and regularly protest against the show trials by the Soviet government.

youths cried, "White Power!" Counter-demonstrators were just as vocal, chanting "Death to the Nazis" and "Go to hell, Frank."

But if some in the crowd wanted violence, they had to settle for throwing a few rocks at about 150 Jews and sympathizers who watched the Nazi rally from outside the park.

Authorities said most of those arrested were young people charged with disorderly conduct. No Nazis were arrested.

"I feel great," Collin said after the rally. "Some Jewish Communist got beat up nice and proper. Some nigger got his clothes torn off and they chased one Communist into the lagoon."

Groups of Jews and blacks, some in hard hats and carrying sticks and garbage can lids, were turned away from the rally area by police.

The Jewish Defence League and Concerned Jewish Citizens tried to enter the park north of where the main police force was located, but they met up with police at the park's other end and turned away peacefully.

The rally culminated a year-long legal struggle by the Nazis to obtain a permit to assemble in the park.

The Nazis had vowed to march in the heavily Jewish suburb of Skokie. When the courts cleared the way for Sunday's rally, the Nazis dropped their Skokie plans.

Collin said his Nationalist Socialist party of America will stage more "white power" rallies in Chicago parks this summer pending the outcome of a court hearing Friday to determine whether the Nazis must post a $60,000 insurance bond to hold another rally.

tion, has hit the public with the irresistible impact of an idea whose time has come.

The surge in science fiction's popularity was one of the recurring subjects of discussion during the three-day convention, and some of the old-timers present in the mostly college-aged group viewed the development with mixed feelings.

Writer-editor Frederik Pohl, who spoke about four decades of editing science fiction, noted with awe that Larry Niven and Jerry Pournelle had sold the paperback rights to their Lucifer's Hammer for $250,000 and added a bit wistfully, "That's more money than I have paid to all the authors combined on all the science-fiction magazines I have ever edited."

The trend in science-fiction films, he noted with a shade of distaste, is to exploit special effects.

"Science fiction seems to me to appeal to the forebrain, the analytical part of the mind — not all of it, but the best parts of it," he said. "While I really enjoy the fact that all the TV and film producers of the world are discovering science fiction and laying money on it, I don't really expect that any . . . will be as exciting and revelatory as some great science-fiction novels."

Bank Picket Returns

A Saanich woman is again picketing the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce's regional head office in Vancouver after defeating the bank in a libel suit decided June 15.

The bank sued Mrs. Margaret Mitchell, of 3225 Eldon Place, and her husband for libel last January after they circulated pamphlets and made statements to the news media criticizing the bank for allegedly losing her $10,000 promissory note, then failing to pay her the money or give her a duplicate note.

Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court decided in the Mitchells' favor, ruling that a person can picket or disseminate information as long as the information on the picket is correct.

Mrs. Mitchell has picketed in both Vancouver and Victoria since the dispute began last August.

The bank had been acting for Mrs. Mitchell in an attempt to collect $10,000 owed her since 1970 by a Montreal lawyer. When the bank was unsuccessful, the note was returned to Mrs. Mitchell by regular rather than registered mail. She said she never received it.

U.S. Dollar Still Shaky

Times News Services

The American dollar opened lower on all major money markets today with European bankers and dealers voicing new concern about the U.S. economy. In Zurich, the dollar fell 1.2 percent below Friday's rate in the first hour of trading.

Gold was up $1.75 in Zurich to $185.875 and $1.875 higher in London at $186.

Loto Correction

OTTAWA (CP) — The first number drawn for $7,000 in the Loto Canada draw Friday was 1035556.

The Canadian Press incorrectly said it was 1085556. There were 68 prizes worth $7,000 in the draw.

About 100 robed and hooded Ku Klux Klansmen, led by their Grand Dragon on horseback and another member carrying a bible, marched on the weekend in an hour-long parade through Davey, Fla., that took years to arrange.

The Klan's efforts began three years ago when members asked permission to participate in the Boy Scouts' annual Memorial Day parade. In answer to the request, the parade was cancelled.

Subsequent Klan parade requests were turned down by the town council until this year when, according to Mayor Jim DeLeo, permission was granted because of the turmoil that resulted when a Nazi group tried to march through Skokie, Ill.

Although the entire route was lined with onlookers, there were no incidents and little heckling.

Nearly all the marchers wore their hoods but were not masked, in accordance with Florida law which requires parade marchers to show their faces.

NOW, BREAKFAST FIT FOR QUEEN

STE. HIPPOLYTE, Que. (CP) — A local businessman has shipped two gallons of maple syrup to Queen Elizabeth because he couldn't bear the thought of Her Majesty sitting down to breakfast without it.

Hyman Weisbord made the decision upon learning that the City of Westmount, an affluent Montreal suburb, will vote to discontinue its decade-old habit of sending maple syrup to the Queen because she apparently failed to thank them for this year's shipment.

Buckingham Palace has launched an investigation to determine if they did indeed overlook their customary thank-you note to Westmount's city council.

"We've sent the Queen enough to hold her until city council votes on the issue in mid-August.

"But if they maintain their ungracious attitude we intend to send her more."

Weisbord and partner Anne O'Grady are co-founders of Fin d'Hiver Inc., a maple syrup bottling and distributing firm.

The syrup cleared customs Saturday at Mirabel International Airport and was to be shipped aboard an evening flight to London.

Firestone Resisting Tire-Recall Pressure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Firestone 500 Steel Belted Radial tires "have failed in significant numbers," according to the U.S. transport department which on the weekend recommended that the firm issue a recall immediately.

However, the department's national highway traffic safety administration did not order a recall for the 13 million to 15 million tires estimated to be on U.S. roads. A final determination will be made after a hearing Aug. 7.

Firestone, through public relations director Bernard Frazier, said it does not believe a recall is justified. The firm quit making its top-of-the-line 500 early last year, replacing it with a tire called the 721.

"There is no safety-related reason for the public to be concerned about continuing to use the Firestone Steel Belted Radial 500 or any other properly maintained Firestone-made tire," Frazier said. "The 500 is providing reliable service to millions of motorists today as it has for many years."

Federal engineers said they analyzed more than 6,000 reports from consumers alleging "more than 14,000 individual tire failures, 29 deaths, more than 50 injuries, and hundreds of property damage accidents."

Tires identical to the Firestone 500 Steel Belted Radial are sold by Shell Oil Co. dealers under the brand name Super Shell Steel Radial, and by Montgomery Ward Co. as the Grappler Radial 8000 series, the agency said.

Frazier said "we contend that the 500 has not been proven to be the cause of fatalities in any accidents in which it has been involved."

The traffic safety administration said the tire failures "are characterized by blowouts, tread separations, and other failures . . . ."

The Firestone spokesman said the firm will respond to the agency "with our reasons why the recall is not necessary and should not take place."

WOMEN PUSH RIGHTS ISSUE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of the equal rights amendment to the U.S. constitution, who marched by the tens of thousands Sunday in support of the proposal, were lobbying members of Congress today to extend the March deadline for ratifying the measure.

The National Organization for Women and more than 300 other groups staged the march and a rally on the steps of the Capitol to dramatize their stand that, even if the proposal dies next spring, the issue will not fade away.

Bella Abzug, co-chairman of the National Advisory Committee on Women, told the marchers to "lobby (members of Congress) and make as a condition of support of their re-election a vote for the ERA extension."

The head of the liberal Americans for Democratic Action, Patsy Mink, told the marchers not to leave Washington "without having a firm commitment, yes or no, from every member" of Congress.

"And if they dare to turn us down," she said, "we will turn them out on the next election day."

Packing Talks Reach Impasse

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union says there are no signs of resuming contract negotiations with Swift Canada Ltd.

Bill Reno, research director, said in an interview today that the union is hoping Swift representatives will ask for a resumption of talks.

About 2,000 workers at Swift went on strike June 19 in Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Lethbridge and Vancouver, seeking parity in wages and benefits with workers at the company's plants in the United States.

Canada Packers locked out 4,000 workers three days later in areas where it operates packing plants in competition with Swift saying it would be bound by any settlement reached by Swift.

Tourist Violence Is Over, Mexico Promises Canadians

HAMILTON (CP) — The head of the Mexican tourist council says recent acts of violence against Canadian tourists in Mexico will not be repeated because the Mexican government now has control of the situation.

Miquel Aleman, speaking through an interpreter, told a news conference the incidents, in which several Canadian visitors died or were injured while on holiday in Mexico, were a matter of great sadness to his government.

"We can assure you, at this moment Acapulco has an organization of the municipal authorities and of the police that makes us confident that we will not have more incidents," said Aleman, who also is a former president of Mexico.

It was during Aleman's administration that Acapulco was developed as a tourist area.

Aleman was in Hamilton to open the Hamilton Art Gallery.

Nose-Heavy Charge 'Pure Speculation'

TORONTO (CP) — Spokesman for both Air Canada and the federal transport ministry say they do not know if the DC-9 aircraft which crashed on takeoff June 26 at Toronto International Airport, killing two persons, was nose-heavy.

Air Canada spokesman Brock Stewart said it was pure speculation to say the aircraft had too much weight distributed toward the nose of the plane.

The Sun said in published reports Sunday that two printouts from Air Canada's computer centre outline the DC-9's load distribution.

The newspaper quoted an unidentified Air Canada loading supervisor as saying the load distribution would have made it difficult for the pilot to pull up the aircraft's nose for liftoff.

In addition to the two persons killed, the other 100 passengers and all five crew members were injured in the mishap.

The plane was headed for Winnipeg and Vancouver when it plunged into a ravine after leaving the runway.

John Shelton, a ministry spokesman, said he could not comment on the report but said all factors were being taken into consideration by the crash investigation team.

A 15-member ministry team has completed its on-site investigation and now is compiling its report, he said.

POWER SNAG SETS SKYLAB INTO ROLL

HOUSTON (UPI) — Space agency officials say a power outage Sunday in the Skylab space station has caused more problems in the laboratory's orbit.

"Several attempts were made to reorient (the attitude), however these were unsuccessful," said spokesman Bob Gordon. "The spacecraft has been reconfigured to recharge the batteries on board."

Gordon said computers on Skylab were rendered temporarily inoperative, but had been restored. He said the craft would have to be turned so its solar panels could trap energy for recharging the batteries.

"It's not in an unstable position, but a random attitude. It's rolling," he said. "We really don't know what it is, but the batteries ran down for some reason.

"We're back where we started two months ago. The only advantage is that we have done this before," Gordon said.

Uganda Athletes May See Games

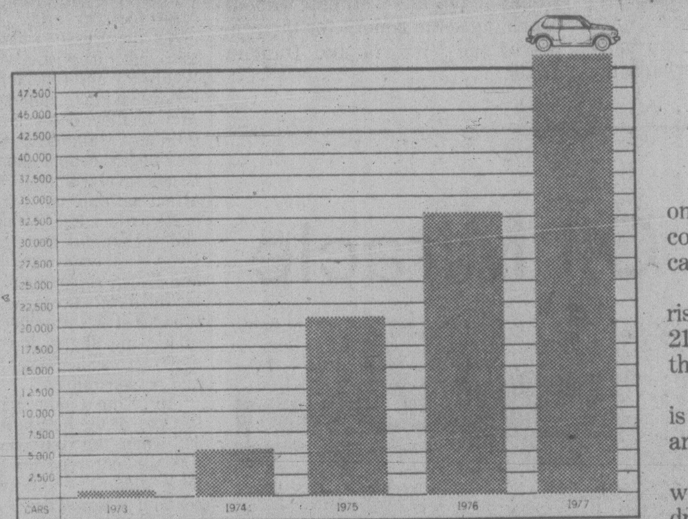
EDMONTON (CP) — A reported last-minute reversal of Uganda's decision to boycott the Commonwealth Games has been welcomed by Don McColl, Commonwealth Games Foundation general manager.

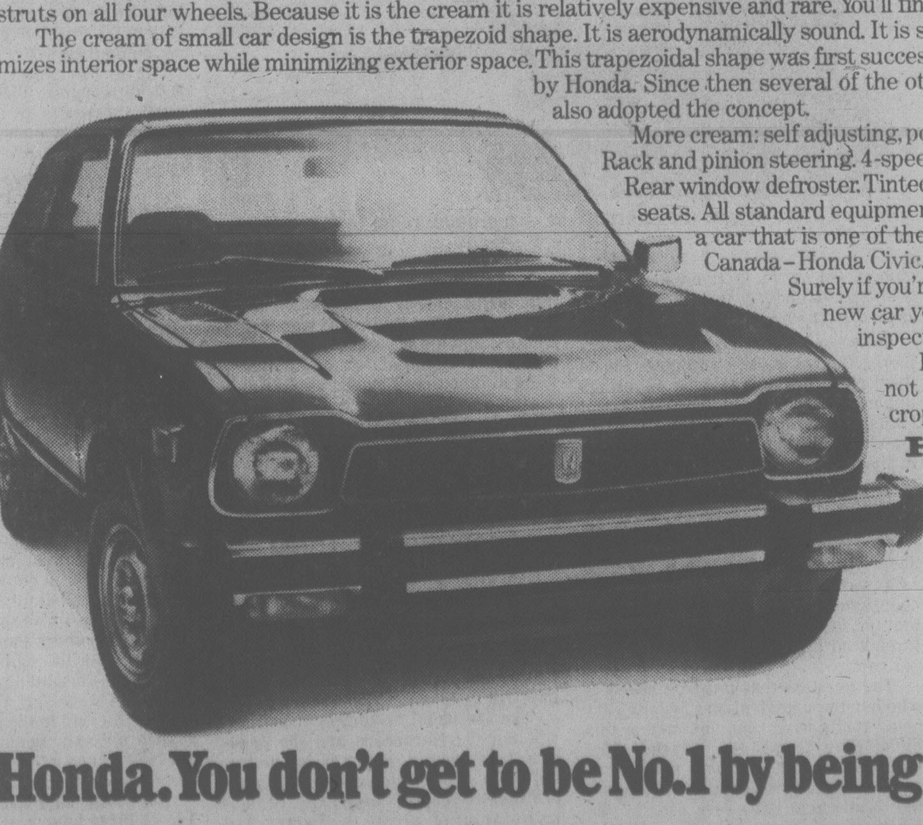
McColl said the foundation is anxious for as many nations as possible to come.

Idi Amin, president of Uganda, said his country would boycott the Games next month because he himself would not be welcome in Canada.

However, members of the Ugandan team participating in the third African Games in Algiers have said the boycott could be called off.

The Ugandan athletes arrived at Algiers wearing T-shirts with a photograph depicting Amin on a throne carried on the shoulders of four whites, with the inscription; "Idi Amin — King of Africa — Conqueror of the British Empire."





IN CARS, AS IN MILK, THE CREAM RISES TO THE TOP.

In a few short years Honda Civic has risen, like the cream of the crop, to become the No.1 small car in Canada.*

It is a fact of life that there can only be one number one. There can only be one president of a country or company. There can only be one winner in a race. There can only be one first man on the moon.

In the area of small economy cars the one that has risen, like cream, to the top is Honda Civic. In the past 21 months more Canadians have discovered and praised the virtues of Honda Civic than any other small car.

The reason that Honda Civic is the cream of the crop is because it utilizes the cream of automotive design and engineering.

The cream of small car drive trains has become front wheel drive. A Honda Civic not only has front wheel drive, but it also has a transversely mounted engine to free up more interior space. Front wheel drive improves traction, uses the engine's power more efficiently and delivers an uncanny sense of control and enjoyment to the driver. The cream of car suspensions is independent McPherson struts on all four wheels. Because it is the cream it is relatively expensive and rare. You'll find it on the Honda Civic.

The cream of small car design is the trapezoid shape. It is aerodynamically sound. It is stable. And most of all, it maximizes interior space while minimizing exterior space. This trapezoidal shape was first successfully introduced to Canada by Honda. Since then several of the other car manufacturers have also adopted the concept.

More cream: self adjusting, power assisted front disc brakes. Rack and pinion steering. 4-speed transmission. Carpeting. Rear window defroster. Tinted glass. Fully reclining bucket seats. All standard equipment. And all available in a car that is one of the most moderately priced in Canada – Honda Civic.

Surely if you're in the process of choosing a new car you owe it to yourself to closely inspect a Honda Civic.

Look at it this way; if you're not getting the cream of the crop, then what are you getting?

Expecting the Impossible

Recent criticisms of the public school system by Surrey Mayor Bill Vogel have revived the years-old debates of why-Johnny-can't-read and whether it is true that public schools today have low academic standards, no discipline and lazy, clock-watching teachers.

The fact of the matter is that the school system seems to be everybody's favorite scapegoat these days. Politicians from other corners — the provincial government and municipal councils — blame it for excessive increases in taxes. All sorts of people blame it for not preventing juvenile delinquency and vandalism. Parents blame it for the fact that their kids can't get jobs when they leave school and maybe don't read too well either.

Heaven knows, the public school system is a long way from being perfect. Some school districts are top-heavy with bureaucracy and reluctant to cut back on spending even as enrolments decrease. For a while in the late 1960s and early '70s, many teachers put too little emphasis on basic skills, a trend that now is being turned around. And a small proportion of teachers, like a small proportion of the members of any other occupational group, are lazy, unenthusiastic or even downright incompetent.

However, these isolated weaknesses are no excuse for the sort of blanket negative generalizations that came from Vogel and are popular in many other quarters. The school system is no worse — and no better — than any other near-monopoly in our system.

Perhaps a more basic problem is that the expectations we have for the school system are far too high. Because it is a near-monopoly — a complete monopoly for the many who cannot afford to send their children to independent schools — and because it eats up lots of tax dollars, it is supposed to perform virtual miracles.

It is supposed, of course, to teach children to read, to write comprehensible English, and to multiply and divide. It is also supposed to imbue them with the Protestant work ethic, to teach them to think, and to give them a positive view of themselves and the world. It is supposed to teach them to be tolerant, responsible and obedient, to respect law and order, and to use their time constructively. It is also supposed to teach them the skills necessary so that each and every one of them can get a job in a country where the unemployment rate is 8.6 per cent and where almost half of the unemployed are between the ages of 14 and 24.

It is supposed, in other words, to do the impossible.

No teacher — who sees a child for a maximum of six hours a day — can make him think he is a success if his family and other children tell him he's a stupid failure. No school can teach a child tolerance if in all the other adults around him he sees prejudice and bigotry. And no school system can provide a job for every student in a society in which there are thousands more people looking for jobs than there are jobs to be had.

If someone has specific complaints that children are not learning how to read, write and do mathematics, then the school system should be held accountable.

It is, however, entirely unfair to blame it for failing to produce Utopian children to fit into non-existent jobs in a North American society that is anything but Utopian.

Uses for a Rail Line

The decision last week by the Canadian Transport Commission (CTC) to allow Canadian National Railways to abandon its spur rail line between Victoria and Deerholme, near Duncan, gives the people of southern Vancouver Island an 35-mile long legacy with immense potential.

The last time CNR talked of giving up the route, a couple of years ago, several ideas for its use were proposed but they died when the CNR never did formally abandon the line.

One idea was to pave over the railway track to turn the route into a recreational bicycle path for the southern Island with, perhaps, campsites en route and a hiking trail alongside. The main problem foreseen with this option was that the route would pass through the Greater Victoria Water District watershed, an area normally closed to hikers and cyclists for fear of pollution and fire.

Another idea was to use the line as the beginning of a light rapid transit system for Victoria, carrying commuters from the western community and perhaps even from Mill Bay and Shawnigan Lake to and from Victoria. This idea was never thoroughly developed.

But now that the line is formally abandoned, someone, perhaps the much-maligned Capital Regional District, should begin immediate studies to find out what the best use of it would be. If a rapid transit system would be economic in the near future, then the line should probably be reserved for that. If it will be years before Victoria is ready for such a sophisticated system, then maybe the recreational possibilities of the route should be explored.

But no matter what the final answer is, the line should not be left simply to fall into disrepair without providing some benefit for the people of the Victoria and Duncan areas.

Jimmy Carter's Oil Miracle

WASHINGTON — This week in Bonn, U.S. President Jimmy Carter is going to tell the leaders of the world's major industrial democracies a story about a miracle. Carter's miracle involves oil rather than fishes and loaves, but the story is almost as impressive as the original.

The U.S. president will announce to his colleagues that the U.S. is succeeding in curbing its gluttonous appetite for oil. Carter will concede, of course, that there is still a problem, but he will take the offensive in defending his administration's abysmal energy record.

Citing newly released commerce department figures, the president will argue in effect that his administration's lack of action has produced the desired results. The odds are that the other leaders, who have been outspoken in their criticism of the United States' inability to put a lid on its oil imports, will be skeptical of Carter's claims.

Troubles at Home

The irony is, though, that if the U.S. president succeeds in assuaging the concerns of the international community, he may further damage his own credibility at home. It hardly needs to be pointed out again that the energy issue has been an albatross to Carter almost since he entered office.

The president only 10 days ago called together influential members of Congress to beseech them for action on his energy package before Bonn. The White House argued that it would be disastrous if the president had to go to Bonn and confess that the U.S. had been unable to deal with its most pressing economic problem: a growing balance of payments deficit that has weakened the U.S. dollar abroad and created a worldwide rippling effect.

Britain, France and West Germany have already served notice that they expect some firm commitments from the U.S. in Bonn about a plan of action for cutting back oil imports. The reaction of the U.S. congress to these assertions of international concern was to pass legislation effectively eliminating the president's ability to promise the Bonn summit anything. The administration was, needless to say, extremely unhappy about this development. But that was before the "miracle."

A new commerce department statistical analysis of U.S. trade during the first five months of 1978 shows that U.S. oil imports have taken a dramatic plunge. Oil is, in fact, no longer the leading contributor to the American balance of payments deficit.

Between January and May, the commerce figures show, oil imports fell to third place in the catalogue of foreign imports. Purchases of machinery and transport equipment ranked in first place, followed by imports of manufacturing goods, with oil bringing up the rear.

During the five-month period, the U.S. imported 1.2 billion barrels of oil worth $15.9 billion. This represented a decrease of almost $2 billion over the same period a year earlier. In fact, the commerce department analysis shows that in the last year, all imports of foreign oil have dropped more than 10 per cent.

The question that must be asked is whether the president and his advisers could really have been unaware of this developing trend. Or, whether, for political purposes, it was decided to keep this good news quiet. Obviously, the figures that have been used by the White House have served to aid the administration in its attempts to persuade a recalcitrant congress to take action on the Carter energy package. An announcement by the president that oil imports were in fact declining would have served to counter his purpose.

Or, to be more precise, such a disclosure would have been domestically counterproductive. A man who has declared the energy situation the moral equivalent of a state of war cannot confess that his assessment was in error and expect to maintain a credibility.

And that would indeed appear to be Carter's current dilemma. He knows that the U.S. must have an energy policy dedicated to conservation, but he would appear to have just lost his major bargaining tool — a sense of crisis.

Aberration or Trend?

Administration officials are still examining these latest trade statistics to determine whether they represent some aberration rather than a trend. But they readily concede that the administration is now reassessing the posture that will be taken at Bonn.

The president, according to sources, will tell the Europeans and the Japanese that the U.S. dollar is in trouble, not because of oil imports, but because of excessive exports to the U.S. of their manufactured products. Carter will argue that the best solution to the problem would be for these same nations to take steps to open more of their markets to American products.

Jimmy Carter may just be able to pull it off in Bonn, but it requires little imagination to anticipate the consequence the next time he dons a cardigan to tell the nation about the oil crisis.

News Blackout?

On June 29, the minister of forests, Tom Waterland with the aid of the balance of the Social Credit members, pushed through the B.C. Legislature the new Forest Act, Bill 14. This bill, the most important piece of legislation to appear in decades, serves to benefit the large forest companies by further consolidating their corporate control over our dwindling forest reserves — and was passed into law over the objections of every single member of the Liberal, Progressive Conservative, and NDP parties.

In a survey recently done in Vancouver by UBC, only 21 of 200 people interviewed were aware that such legislation even existed. This is deplorable. There's a scandal here, folks — such consistent blackout of forestry news isn't accidental. For example, during legislative debate on June 16 concerning the new Forest Act, Bill King, the opposition MLA forestry critic, had this to say about the press: "I have never been so thoroughly disgusted with the reporting. Where are the reporters who should be in here trying to understand the debate? And if they don't understand it, for goodness' sake send someone in here who does, because there are important issues involved here. They're going to affect not only our generation but generations to come. I think it's shocking and scandalous that this kind of giveaway is allowed without even adequate and proper reporting in the press, alerting the people throughout the length and breadth of this province. Mr. Speaker, it makes me angry; it really makes me angry. It's a shocking abdication of duty and responsibility."

Mr. King's point was proven on the last day of the legislative session (June 29) when this bill was passed: there was only one reporter in the legislative press gallery — and even he was busy reading a newspaper. And even more remarkably, not one mention was made in the Victoria Times, the Daily Colonist, and the Vancouver Sun (a one-line blurb appeared in the Province) concerning the passage of this pernicious bill. It is indeed scandalous that the fat cats in the legislative press gallery are not doing their job.

Never has it been more apparent in B.C. to recognize that we can't be free until the press is free. — Richard Krieger, 1260 Walnut Street.

Alcoholism

I just read the letter written by Anne Sherbrook (Protection Needed; Times, June 29). I totally agree with her in what she says about the treatment for junkies and drug addicts.

Now it's time we go one step farther and include the people who are prone to become alcoholics. Their lives are equally as miserable as a drug addict.

When sober, they can be beautiful people, loving, kind, gentle, polite. When they are drunk, their personalities change completely. Then for the least little thing they become raving maniacs, screaming, cursing at their spouse, children or anyone else they can lash out at. Sometimes I wonder are they not just mad at themselves for their weakness in not being able to stop their drinking before they become inebriated. They sound so frustrated.

It even bothers the neighbors. They too can hear the outburst of foul language, the screaming at the children, and also can see the personality changes alcohol really does to otherwise a very pleasant person and neighbor, but they can go in, close their doors and forget about it.

But not the poor spouse and children. The children love their home, they love their parents. It hurts them to no end to have a parent like that. They don't want to leave their parents to get away from it. It also causes embarrassment to children when a parent blows off like that because of alcohol in front of his friends.

You parents who see yourself in these conditions, if you love your children, for their sake, get help. You can be such loving parents when sober. If you continue in your old alcoholic way, don't expect, when your children grow up that they will show you the love and attention you yearn for. They could still love you but find it hard to show you it.

There should be equally as many advertisements in publications in regards to the dangers of alcohol as there are advertisements for the stuff they want to sell. — Mrs. Agnes McKenzie, 1355 Pembroke Street.

Disarmament

The struggle for general and complete disarmament ought to be one of the most important aims of Canadian foreign policy. According to UN statistics, the defence and military expenditures of its member states exceed $300 million — 3½ times more than the amount assigned for education. The money that goes into the construction of one U.S. Trident submarine would be enough to teach 16 million children in the developing countries for one year, while the cost of a moderm war plane is four times more than if it were cast from pure gold.

The attempt to present the neutron bomb as a conventional defensive weapon ought to evoke particular concern. It is a barbaric inhuman device which would exterminate people without destroying property.

It is my view that your paper needs to give more attention to the foregoing points and to all efforts to ban weapons of mass destruction and to promote the cessation of the arms race through international understanding and co-operation. — Ruth Miller, 453 Head Street.

Save the Children

May I express to the people of Greater Victoria our heartfelt thanks for their generous support of the B.C. Save the Children Fund during 1977-78.

At our annual general meeting held recently in Vancouver, we were gratified to learn that the funds raised provincially totalled $415,494. The following were the figures for Victoria: donations, $5,810.97; bazaars and sales, $4,689.79; collection cans in stores, $337.87; and the Hallowe'en collection (Greater Victoria, Port Alberni, and Chemainus) $4,607.39. In addition, many Victorians have helped needy children through our sponsorship program, contributing regularly to support a specific child or family with whom they correspond. Some 800 children in various parts of the world are helped in this way by B.C. sponsors.

Thanks to the generous support of people throughout the province, and to matching government grants, a boat clinic in Bangladesh, a children's hospital wing in Honduras, feeding projects in India and Lesotho, agricultural programs in Korea and Morocco, mother-and-child centres in Nepal and Thailand, and a clinic in Yemen serving the needs of some 32,000 mothers and children, are among those projects which have become a reality.

Here in Canada, funds have also been used to establish a nutrition program and provide equipment for day care centres in low socio-economic areas. Clothing, health kits, blankets and toys are shipped regularly from Vancouver to nursing stations in the Northwest Territories. (Our neighboring SCF group in Sidney contributes greatly to this effort by meeting regularly to sew quilts and garments, using remnants donated by local people).

During the year, B.C. also donated $3,000 to the SCF team on Emergency Relief in India, working with flood victims. Credit for this tremendous effort goes to all those caring Victorians who send donations, sponsor children and families, or contribute to collection cans; to the hundreds of boys and girls who carry cans at Hallowe'en, and to their teachers who encourage them; to the media; and the dozens of hard-working volunteers who help in so many ways throughout the year. Thanks to all of you. You have given time, money, and love, and — best of all — to thousands of children and anguished parents you have given life and hope. — Heather Siska, Victoria Representative, Save the Children Fund, 1076 Davie Street.

Bilingual Program

G.R. Hunter in his letter of June 29 in the Victoria Times (Swiss Cornflakes) reduces our bilingual problem to essential basics in his explanation of how Switzerland has coped with three separate and distinct languages as a national problem.

As I understand it, you speak the language of the area in which you reside or suffer the consequences of difficulty of communication or make a personal adjustment to the problem.

In Canada it is generally acknowledged that as time progresses, under normal circumstances, the French-speaking population which now is 26 per cent, in time will be only 15 per cent, with further predominance by English in the future.

This indicates French in Canada cannot increase and Trudeau's efforts to produce a French-speaking nation in an English-speaking element is an attempt to defy the law of natural evolution.

The bilingual program from 1970 to 1976 has cost in excess of $1 billion. A treasury board report of February, 1978, shows 1977-78 spending on bilingualism $323,678,000; 1978-79 — $503,416,000 an increase of 64 per cent in one year; a total of almost $1 billion in two years.

We must have bats in our belfry to be apathetic enough to permit this program of bilingualism to not only cause national dissension but to lead us to national indebtedness of this magnitude.

We must not be sidetracked by the bugaboo of Quebec separation; if the residents of Quebec support separation by referendum we accept their decision. However, territorial boundaries must be accepted by the majority of provincial premiers representing the majority of Canadians and not the decision of the government of Canada alone. — K.R. Burns, 401-640 Dallas Road.

Canned Salmon

The federal minister of fisheries has issued an order-in-council limiting the sports fishing canning of salmon to 25 pounds. I have written the minister as follows:

For years we have witnessed untold vandalism in the quantities of fish taken from our waters by visitors who flaunt our laws and regulations. Out of season oysters and clams by the bucketful are taken, often in ignorance. It seems that there is too little warning given as to what's what. Even local sports fishermen are often unaware of what the current limits are. We would ask, with respect, that signs be posted in all relavant areas. How many crab-potters know that a crab is not to be taken unless it measures 6½ inches across its shell? When a culprit is caught in a fishing violation we feel that your inspector's statement that "ignorance is no defence" should be implemented with widespread notices stating what the limits are. This will please the conservationists and all sportsmen will have an equal opportunity in the catch. — Clarence Goode, 4690 Cordova Bay Road.

The Case Against Bilingualism

DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Let's start on James Richardson with some remarks made to me last week by one of his former colleagues, another ex-minister, Bryce Mackasey.

"You journalists always underestimated Jim as a minister. He was heavier in cabinet than you thought, and more persistent and tough than you realized. And further, then and today, there is a substantial constituency out there in English Canada which identifies with Jim and his idea that Canadian unity is threatened by official, entrenched bilingualism."

Two weeks ago, moments before Trudeau presented his first parliamentary speech on Bill-C-60, the first phase of constitutional reform, Mr. Richardson forsook the government side before the whole House. He crossed into opposition, declaring the abominable element of Bill-60 to be the enshrinement in perpetuity of bilingualism. As the wealthy Winnipegger sees it, official bilingualism outside Quebec guarantees division. It is a never-ending threat to the union.

Richardson is consistent, at least since Oct. 13, 1976. Then, quitting the cabinet, he said: "We are still a country finding our way and we shouldn't lock the language policy in."

He has two ready illustrations of practicalities which have led him to insist that bilingualism should be kept at the level of statutory law (which is always amendable) and not be given a permanent sanction of language equality.

When minister of national defence Richardson saw to it that, at Valcartier Camp where 80 per cent were Francophone, 20 per cent Anglophone, parents had the free choice of a French language or English language school, what was the result? Consistently, around 40 per cent went to the French, 60 per cent to the English.

His next illustration is Trudeau himself. "When the PM says that we are made for bilingualism in Canada and that it is the very condition of our existence, he is right — right for him as a Quebecer. But as a Canadian he is wrong. He would not be prime minister if he were unilingual French."

When did Mr. R. realize that he had a fundamental difference on the language issue with his leader and his colleagues?

Firstly, Mr. R. makes the point that most of the Anglo ministers from outside Quebec basically agreed with his reading on bilingualism. They slid along with the PM's views, however, because it was hard to buck them head on, and bilingualism itself seemed to cast a noble aura. Only Donald Macdonald of all the cabinet, during his period in it, was a trenchant advocate and believer of bilingualism.

Trudeau knew of such doubts and lack of deep conviction on Canada-wide bilingualism in the ministry. He knew Richardson's feelings, even when he spoke to him on his appointment to head DND in 1972. Essentially, says Richardson, he asked me if I would behave with benevolence towards bilingualism in the services and the department. As for full cabinet meetings, there was never talk or argument at length and in detail on bilingualism. "The subject was never addressed fully and persistently in cabinet meetings," said Richardson to me. (He was in the cabinet for eight years!)

Unlike another defector, Paul Hellyer, Richardson does not see Trudeau as a "pinko" or socialist in disguise. Rather he's economically in the middle of the road with some bureaucratic tines!

Much of the general alienation in Canada, particularly on the Prairies, is not against a strong national government but against the duality implicit in official bilingualism from sea to sea.

Richardson believes it inevitable that official bilingualism enshrined constitutionally and practised intensely means a continuing litany of bitterness.

For example, there is a real intent that the top 1,000 posts in the federal service be designated as bilingual. This means, soon enough, that it will be 80 per cent Francophone, 20 per cent Anglophone.

I told him that I had seen on Parliament Hill over 20 years a shift from a staff about 70 per cent English and 30 per cent French to the reverse. Traumatic as it may have been for some, the place functioned and the shift had given French-Canadians jobs and probably more sense of sharing in Canada. Indeed, most of us in the media tended to support official bilingualism simply because it seemed the one way to keep Quebec in Canada. Richardson says the reverse is true.

Concessions only perpetuate an illusion. There is an onus on Anglos in Quebec to be bilingual, Mr. R. believes, but for the rest of Canada let us recognize the facts of the union, historically, and as it is.

"On language," says Richardson, "the BNA Act spells out essentially my position. It mustn't be changed, at least not changed on language provisions."

Mr. Richardson insists most English-Canadians and close to a majority of French-Canadians would agree with him that Canada is indivisible. Its future should not be the bilingual propositions of Pierre Trudeau.

Is This a Crisis or a Celebration?

By WILLIAM JOHNSON

QUEBEC—Nationalism, either of the Quebec or Canadian variety, is turning my life into one long concert. I'm not getting enough sleep. How can I when my windows are rattled, late into the night, by the music of Gilles Vigneault, recorded, or Johnny Farago, live, until 2 a.m. — day after day, night after night, courtesy of our governments.

Life, these days, is an endless succession of music, flags, crowds, color, noise. We citizens of Old Quebec are only afraid that some day it will end. Would sober Claude Ryan, if he came to power, sponsor those endless celebrations of joie de vivre in the Jardins des Gouverneurs? Would the federal government, if the Parti Quebecois were bounced, continue to put on Charity Brown, Homage aux Beatles, Nanette Workman, Toubabou and Pagliaro free on Dufferin Terrace?

Could the drab old days before the PQ return? There was a time when St. Jean-Baptiste was the patron saint of French-Canadians, and he was celebrated only on June 24. There were bonfires, parades with floats, a boy Jean-Baptiste with a lamb. It was all very nice, but only one day?

During the Quiet Revolution the boy Jean-Baptiste became a big strong man. The lamb, docile animal, was found an unsuitable symbol for a people and was shed.

Now the PQ has shed Jean-Baptiste altogether, man or boy. Instead, we are given la fete nationale du Quebec. This year Bill 48 made it official: June 24 is the national fete of Quebec.

It has its own slogan: "le Quebec est au monde" — a play on words. It could mean Quebec is born, or Quebec belongs to the people, or Quebec belongs to the world. Everywhere, across the province, celebrations, celebrations.

But there was more. There was also la semaine du patrimoine (heritage week), from June 23 to June 30. Again, across Quebec, celebrations, full-page ads in newspapers, flags, music, exhibitions, handicrafts, films, dances, pamphlets. The Minstry of Cultural Affairs states that about 1,000 activities took place across the province in conjunction with la semaine du patrimoine. The week has two slogans: "aux sources de notre avenir" (to the origins of our future) and "le Quebec est en fleur" (Quebec is in bloom).

Exhibitions? "There are exhibitions of everything," says the ministry. "Painting, sculpture, furniture, macrame, counterpoint, weaving, knitting, pottery, ancient clothing, tools, agricultural machinery, children's drawings, stage curtains and anything else."

Then there is Canada week, culminating in fireworks on the Plains of Abraham, but only after a cacophony of concerts, bicycle races, mass at Notre-Dame-des-Victoires (the oldest church in Canada), a ringing of church bells, a play for children, a 21-gun salute from the Citadel, an aerial banner drawn by a plane saying "Bonne Fete Canada," a demonstration of parachute jumping, of aerial acrobatics by a Second World War biplane, a disco, a flotilla of illuminated boats cruising past Quebec on the St. Lawrence.

Canada week has its slogan of course: "le Canada, c'est toi et moi" — Canada is You and I.

You think that's all? No, no, it's only the beginning. The Quebec government, having suspended its festivities on July 1, was right back with us the next day and the festivities will continue until July 15.

Under the directions of the cabinet itself a new three-day event, a homecoming, has been organized this year, called the Retour aux Sources — returnto the origins. Its stated occasion is the 370th anniversary of the founding of Quebec by Champlain on July 3, but never was a 370th anniversary of anything celebrated with such an outpouring of events before, worthy of at least a centenary. It was as though, this year, the Quebec government had discovered, as a result of archaeological digs, that Quebec was founded on July 3, 1608, and wanted the world to know it. (There are an estimated 10 million descendants of Quebecers outside Quebec . . .)

I have before me a press kit about one-inch thick telling me all about the "get-together for the French-speaking people of America." It features a big open-air show that includes, among others, Yvon Deschamps, Quebec's incomparable comic monologuist, and singers Diane Dufresne and Edith Butler. And days of discussion and visits. A delegation of about 150 people are attending from Louisiana. In fact, an over-ambitious press release states that the festivities "will bring together hundreds of thousands of North Americans of Quebec ancestry."

One learns that Pierre Le Moyne, d'Iberville founded Louisiana, as well as Mobile, Alabama; La Mothe Cadillac founded Detroit, and — but why go on?

After all these festivities, more festivities. The Festival of Quebec, music and spectacles of all kinds, is on from July 3 to July 15.

Nationalism may do bad things for the economy and one's sleep but it does wonders for the performing arts.

Dying is Bad for You

russell baker

A show-business man told me recently of an actor who turned down a role because it required him to die at the end of the movie. The actor thought it would be bad for his career. Having enjoyed a run of successes during the past few years, he felt like a man with a future and believed that dying might put an end to it.

Whatever his motives, this actor deserves a standing ovation. Dying threatens to replace getting the cattle to Abilene as the central theme of American theatrical and cinematic endeavor. Jack Lemmon is getting laughs by dying on Broadway, and Burt Reynolds — Burt Reynolds! — is dying in his latest movie.

The big prize-winner on Broadway last year was about dying, and this season we have had Cold Storage, which the critics also applauded. Its subject is aptly described by the title. All this occurs at a moment when educational gurus are urging curricula that acquaint the young with the facts of death right along with the facts of the multiplication tables, and it is widely acclaimed as healthy.

Maybe it is, although in my experience things that are widely acclaimed as healthy usually turn out to be bad for you. I remember when they used to say sunshine, plenty of milk and eggs and a good thick steak were healthy. Now they say they're all terrible for you.

Dying, of course, has always been an important dramatic activity, but it is usually fitted into other entertaining events. Aeschylus, Shakespeare, John Ford, Warner Brothers — all the giants had people dying in droves, but these people didn't just sit around for two or three hours waiting to die, as people do in the new style.

Dying, let us face it, is a very ordinary activity. As Tolstoy illustrated in Anna Karenina, it can even become unbearably tiresome on the audience — Kitty and Levin in the Tolstoy book — if not necessarily to the party undergoing the experience.

This spate of entertainments about the humdrum of dying probably reflects the disappearance of the old entertainment moguls. By moguls, I refer to studio heads like Louis M. Mayer, Harry Cohn and Sam Goldwyn, who were always referred to in the Hollywood copy as "moguls." The word became so firmly attached to Louis B. Mayer that I have always thought of him as Louis B. Mogul.

None of the moguls would have put up with anybody on the lot who wanted to make a movie about people sitting around waiting to die. With showmen's instinct, they knew that death was ordinary and, hence, had to be elevated into a big moment when it was used. Occasionally, though very rarely, it was necessary for a star to die at the end of the show.

When this had to happen, the death scene customarily took as long as an afternoon at Die Walkure and often, in the final shot, the deceased star would be revivified up in the clouds doing something vital.

When Cecil B. DeMille was compelled to kill Gary Cooper as Wild Bill Hickok in The Plainsman, he didn't shrug it off with a quick fade-out. He sent in Jean Arthur for a long bout of weeping, made Gary's eyelids flutter in a close-up, and then closed with a beautiful shot of Gary up in the sky driving a team of horses hitched to a wagon with Jean Arthur beside him. How Jean got up into the clouds is a question that had never bothered me until this very moment, such is the power of a really good mogul.

There is a story of Louis B. Mayer flying into a rage after seeing footage of an Andy Hardy scene in which Mickey Rooney, as Andy, was praying for the life of his ostensibly dying mother. The director had shown Andy standing at Mother Hardy's bed in prayer. "When Andy Hardy prays, he gets down on his knees," Mayer is said to have screamed. The scene was reshot. Andy got down on his knees. Mother Hardy recovered. If you dealt with death, Mayer seemed to believe, you didn't handle it as an ordinary event, you did it in a big way.

The moguls all are gone now. I asked Calvin Trillin, an authority on such things, what happened to the moguls. He tells me they were replaced by the wheeler-dealers, but that the wheeler-dealers have mostly vanished too, and are being replaced by the hustlers.

I don't know that the hustlers are particularly interested in the humdrum of death. But, being hustlers, they are apt to have little time for the details of multi-million-dollar schemes brought to them by actors and independent film makers. Since people of this class usually have to be middle-aged to get a hustler's ear, it is only natural that they would be bemused by death and intent on working out their own philosophies about it in their productions. The philosophies of such persons are likely to be humdrum, commonplace and unedifying.

Though death is ordinary, for each of us individually it is too big a moment to be reduced to ordinary entertainment. The moguls may not have had much philosophy, but they understood our commonplace need to associate the end with grandeur, or at least a little tinsel.

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Sharp gains in energy issues sent the Toronto stock market moderately higher in active mid-afternoon trading.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 2.11 million shares compared with 2.87 million at the same time Friday.

Advances led declines 187 to 154 with 218 issues unchanged.

Ashland Oil Canada gained 1 to $30⅝, Noranda Mines A ¾ to $26¾, Canadian Occidental Petroleum ⅝ to $21½, Indal Ltd. ⅝ to $12 and Elks Stores Ltd. ½ to $13½.

Alberta Energy was down ½ to $16⅛, Canada Trustco Mortgage A ½ to $25½, Alberta Gas Trunk A ¼ to $14¼, Husky Oil ¼ to $43 and Thomson Newspapers A ⅛ to $14.

Roman Corp. rose ¾ to $26¾, Kerr Addison Mines A ⅝ to $11¼ and Camflo Mines ½ to $15½. Sherritt Gordon A fell ¼ to $5⅜ and Consolidated Canadian Faraday 15 cents to $3.40.

Prairie Oil Royalties climbed 1½ to $17½, Chieftain Development 1¼ to $21¼ and Amalgamated Bonanza Petroleum 1⅛ to $33⅞. Canadian Merrill declined ¾ to $19 and Canada Southern Petroleum ⅜ to $5.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were generally higher in moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Hudson's Bay Oil gained ¼ at $44¼, Ashland Oil ⅝ at $30⅜, Canadian Industries Ltd. ⅛ at $20¼, Royal Bank ⅛ at $32¼, Zeller's A ⅜ at $9 and Toronto Dominion Bank ⅛ at $19¾. Texasgulf lost ¼ at $20¼ and Alberta Gas Trunk Line A ⅛ at $14⅜. Among speculative issues, New Insco Mines advanced three cents to 48 cents on a volume of 5,000 shares traded.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices drifted around last week's closing levels in a listless mid-summer session.

Analysts noted that buyers had begun to move in last Thursday after a steady four-week decline in most issues.

Weakness in the dollar is presumed to dampen interest in the U.S. stock market among foreign investors, whose buying played a significant role in the strong rally on Wall Street this spring.

"The stock market in recent months has been highly sensitive to fluctuations in the value of the U.S. dollar relative to major foreign currencies," analysts at Standard and Poor's Corp. observed in the current issue of the firm's advisory publication.

Boeing climbed 1⅝ to $54¼ in active trading. British Airways ordered 19 Boeing 737 jets.

London

LONDON (CP) — An improvement in short-term economic indicators sent the London stock market sharply higher near the close of moderate trading. The Financial Times index was up nine points to 464.6 an hour before the close. Leading industrials gained widely, while gold issues moved higher with the bullion price. Canadian stocks were mixed.

Permits Increase

TORONTO (CP) — Building permits valued at a total $145 million were issued in Metropolitan Toronto last month, up from $74 million in May, 1977, A. E. LePage (Ontario) said. Value of permits issued from January to May totalled $412 million, down from $450 million during the five-month period a year ago.

Extension Granted Craigmont

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Craigmont Copper Mines Ltd. mine near Merritt in the southern Interior is expected to continue operating until the end of June next year, the company announced.

The mine still must shut down due to depletion of its copper ore reserves but the time estimate is five months longer than earlier forecast.

"The extension resulted largely from efficient operations for which the mine employees are to be congratulated," said mine manager Bill Diment, adding that the favorable exchange rate between the Canadian and United States dollar also contributed.

There now are about 300 workers at the mine.

Bay's Move Major Inroad For Credit Card Peddlers

WINNIPEG (CP) — An official of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce says inroads are being made into the last major holdout against bank credit cards — the department store.

Jack Wightman, the bank's vice-president of consumer finance, said it took about a year to work out a deal that provided for Hudson's Bay Co. to accept Master Charge and Chargex (Visa).

The Bay is accepting the bank credit cards from the beginning of July at its stores in Toronto, from the end of July in Winnipeg, Regina and Saskatoon, and across Canada by Aug. 8.

"I think it will just add to business," Wightman, who worked on the transaction, said in an interview. "I don't think it will hurt the house card at all."

He said other major department stores, Simpsons Ltd. and T. Eaton Co. Ltd., likely will be watching The Bay's performance for six months to a year before making any similar move.

"We've been talking for years to all the department stores," Wightman said. "The Bay finally just decided to come in. Department stores are the last major holdout."

He said banks don't even want to discuss the possibility of putting bank credit cards in food stores, an idea that has drawn strong opposition from consumer groups and governments.

"If someone can't afford food, it isn't going to help giving them credit to buy it," Wightman said.

A senior official of T. Eaton Co. Ltd. said his company, with headquarters in Toronto, will be taking another look at the possibility of using bank credit cards, but noted that Eaton's already has a credit card system of its own.

"We've considered that alternative off and on since the bank cards became a factor in retailing," the official said.

Wightman declined to say how much The Bay will be charged for sales made on the card, but said the charges will be more than made up in administration costs and covering bad debts.

Ian Ronald, vice-president of finance for The Bay, said the Winnipeg-based firm made the credit card move "purely as a convenience for our customers."

He said Master Charge and Chargex are considered "a supplement to, and definitely not a replacement of, our own card."

"We believe most customers will continue to want to have the total credit facility provided by a combination of bank and store cards," Ronald said. "The major focus will still be on our own card."

Alisdair McKichan, president of the Retail Council of Canada, said of the decision: "They (the banks) saw a chance to extend their customer base. That's obviously the purpose and intent of this move. It was inevitable, and someone had to do it first."

McKichan said department stores account for about 15 per cent of the $40 billion in retail business that is done every year across Canada.

Art Works Destroyed

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — A fire that gutted the city's Modern Art Museum wiped out a collection representing famous artists of the 20th century, from Picasso, Miro and Klee to Dali, Magritte and Dubuffet, museum officials said Sunday.

The monetary value of the 950 destroyed works has not been determined, they said. But the collection's value has been unofficially estimated at between $10 million and $15 million. It was insured for $2.6 million, officials said.

The museum's financial director, Leonidas Borio, said more than $7.5 million would be required to repair the glass-and-concrete building, including installation of an adequate sprinkler alarm system.

The fire destroyed Pablo Picasso's paintings Dora Maar and Cubist Head, Salvador Dali's The Egg on the Plate, without the Plate, and Max Ernst's The Forest.

Also destroyed were Rene Magritte's The Explanation, two paintings by Joan Miro, four paintings by French cubist Fernand Leger, and Lasar Segall's Dead Nature.

Soldiers Battle Locusts

ISLAMABAD (UPI) — Pakistan has deployed soldiers and 25 aircraft to battle a locust plague in two districts labelled "calamity stricken" Sunday by Agriculture and Food Minister Khwaja Mohammad Safdar.

Safdar said India and Pakistan are co-ordinating efforts to battle the swarms of grasshoppers breeding in the Great Indian Desert region that straddles the two countries.

He told reporters a fleet of 25 planes was being used for observation and spraying in Punjab Province, 700 miles south of Islamabad, along with several ground vehicles and troops.

The districts of Rahimyarkhan and Khanpur in Punjab have been declared "calamity-stricken areas," Safdar said.

Safdar said there was no immediate danger to crops from the locusts, which crossed to the Indian sub-continent from Africa.

Spanish Treasure Under Guard

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — U.S. marshals were to take custody today of $2.3 million worth of Spanish treasure until the federal courts decide who actually owns it.

David Paul Horan, a lawyer for Treasure Salvors Inc., said he would accompany the marshals and help take inventory of the treasure — which includes gold, silver and rare navigational artifacts — as it is removed from the vaults of the Florida State Museum.

Horan claims to have information showing the state has not been too careful with the collection.

Mel Fisher and his firm, Treasure Salvors Inc., of Key West, Fla., located the sunken treasure from the Nuestra Senora de Atocha — Our Lady of Atocha — in 1974, but the state claimed a share of the treasure that dates back to 1622.

A later decision by the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the sunken vessel was outside the territorial limits of both the United States and Florida.

Fisher then filed suit in federal court to recover the share held by the state. He said the court battles, including several pleas from Florida to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, have been more taxing than hunting for treasure on the ocean floor.

A full hearing on who owns the treasure is set for July 27 before U.S. District Judge W.O. Mehrtens in Miami.

Fisher has kept his divers working throughout the court hearings, but until recently has not been allowed to sell much of the $18 million in treasure he has found.

Now Fisher has a package of gold and silver ingots, a solid gold bo's'n's whistle and a rare gold poison cup he is offering to sell for $6 million.

OFFICIAL SUICIDE

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Krishan Chand, the lieutenant-governor of Delhi officially criticized for his actions during the emergency rule of Indira Gandhi, was found dead in a well in a Delhi suburb Sunday night, police said today.

A suicide note was found with his shoes beside the well in suburban Anand Lok saying he was feeling depressed over newspaper reports about actions by him during the emergency period, police said.

Expulsion Squabble Rips OAU Session

KHARTOUM (Reuter) — Leaders of the Organization of African Unity argued Sunday over whether they were right to expel a government brought to power by a white mercenary.

The OAU's ministerial council expelled a delegation from the Comoro Islands on Saturday night on the grounds that it represented a regime installed by Belgian-born veteran mercenary Colonel Bob Denard.

But conference sources said some delegates in the 49-country organization were questioning the decision to deny the Comoros a seat at the eight-day meeting which opened Friday.

OAU spokesman Peter Onu said the expulsion of a four-man delegation from the Indian Ocean islands was dictated by its government having seized power two months ago through the intervention of a European mercenary force led by Denard.

Conference sources said the decision to expel the Comoro delegation, headed by Foreign Minister Ali Mroudjae, was unprecedented.

The issue is likely to be taken up by African heads of state due to hold a summit meeting in Khartoum July 18-21.

The Comoros, situated off the east coast of Africa, became independent from France in 1975. In May of last year its Marxist government was overthrown by soldiers headed by Denard, who had previously led mercenaries in Zaire, Yemen and the then Biafra.

Comoro leader Ahmed Abdallah was recalled from exile in Paris to head the ruling council following the coup in which former President Ali Soilih was killed.

Foreign Minister Mroudjae, leader of the expelled delegation, said the OAU move was totally unexpected and that he had asked Ahmed Abdallah to come to the African summit.

One West African Foreign Minister, who did not wish to be quoted by name, said the expulsion was illegal because the Comoros were full members of the OAU and had a perfect right to a seat at the council meeting.

He said the move could open the door to future expulsions without a ballot.

BLOOD IN THE SAND

PAMPLONA (Reuter) — The future of the rest of Pamplona's famous bull-running festival appeared in jeopardy today as fighting again erupted between police and demonstrators and tens of thousands of tourists fled the city.

The festival organizers called for two days of mourning starting today for a young leftist shot to death in bloody riots on Saturday night.

Sunday's celebrations were cancelled.

Sunday night, for the second evening running, police fired rubber bullets and tear gas to disperse hundreds of demonstrators who had barricaded streets and chanted slogans in favor of the Basque guerrilla group ETA.

The riots started on Saturday night as police acted to break up fighting between Basque sympathizers and spectators in the city's bull ring.

One man was killed and 135 injured in the clashes, which spread throughout the city and carried on until early Sunday morning.

Tens of thousands of tourists began streaming out of Pamplona after Sunday's festival activities were cancelled.

MOON DISCOVERED ORBITING PLUTO

WASHINGTON (AP) — A moon has been discovered orbiting the planet Pluto, a finding astronomers say also shows that the solar system's most distant planet is also its smallest, the U.S. Naval Observatory said today.

Astronomer James Christy discovered Pluto's first satellite on June 22 while examining photographs taken in April and May at the Naval Observatory station in Flagstaff, Ariz.

He said he noticed on several photographic plates what appeared to be a bump or irregularity near Pluto. This turned out to be a satellite.

Another Victory For Malay PM

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — National elections gave a strong victory to Prime Minister Hussein Onn and the coalition of ethnic parties that has dominated Malaysian politics since the federation's birth in 1963.

Hussein's National Front alliance won 98 of the 118 races decided in the 154-seat House of Representatives. The opposition Democratic Action Party took 15 seats and the Islamic Party five.

Results of races for the 36 remaining seats were not expected for a week or more.

The Communist Party, which has been fighting a guerrilla war against the government for more than 20 years, is illegal.

Hussein renewed promises he made in the 16-day campaign—to root out corruption, back free enterprise and strive to make Southeast Asia a zone of peace and neutrality.

In simultaneous polling Saturday, the National Front also won control of all 10 state assemblies. It won a total of 239 seats to 25 Democratic Action, nine for Islamic and three for independents.

The coalition won 135 seats in the last national election, in August 1974, taking more than 70 percent of the vote.

A former British colony, Malaysia has a parliamentary form of government in which the lower house is elected for a maximum of five years. The upper house, the Senate, is appointed for six years.

Chickens Can Stay, Welfare Woman Told

VANCOUVER (CP) — A year-long court battle over a city welfare recipient's struggle to keep chickens in her backyard contrary to a city bylaw has ended.

Gabriella Scafidi, 38, received a six-month suspended sentence in county court last week but Judge A. A. W. Macdonnell did not order her to get rid of the chickens.

However, the city health department said it will continue its battle to eliminate urban chicken farming.

City legal director Charles Fleming said the judge "stayed mute on that question to leave it up to us to initiate further action for removal of the chickens, which we expect to do."

Judge Macdonnell ordered Scafidi to keep the peace and stay on good behavior for six months or she would have to return to court for sentencing.

The ruling ended an investigation which began three years ago when a neighbor complained about Scafidi's chickens. The health department ordered her to remove them within 21 days but instead Scafidi's flock of chickens increased.

Then began a series of court cases in which Scafidi argued the egg-laying chickens were the only source of protein her family could afford.

In making the his ruling, Judge Macdonnell said it "would be inappropriate" to impose a fine against the woman for keeping chickens in order to support her children.

Judge Cuts Holidays But Lawyer Takes His

VANCOUVER (CP) — A provincial court judge, who cut short his holidays in Scotland to attend an extradition hearing here Friday, was angry when he discovered the defence lawyer had left the previous day for a vacation in London.

Judge John MacIntyre said he had arranged his holiday to allow for a hearing into the extradition of former Hong Kong police detective Hon Kwing Shum.

When he arrived at court, however, he was told that lawyer H. A. D. Oliver had left on his trip.

Judge MacIntyre requested both the defence and prosecution submit a letter giving reasons for the misunderstanding.

Court adjourned the matter to July 31 to fix a new date for the hearing.

Man Burned

DUNCAN (CP) — Richard Sigurdson, 33, of Duncan suffered first- and second-degree burns Saturday when a fire broke out in his apartment here.

Sigurdson was treated in hospital for burns to his back, legs and hands. The fire was restriced to the apartment and no one else was injured.

UNN Head Back

Wilson polled 365 of 450 votes cast, defeating Fred Favel and Danny Smith for the top post in the native organization.

'Chutist Hits Plane

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — Transport Canada was investigating a freak parachuting accident in which a Vancouver man fell out of a plane before he was prepared to make a jump.

Police said Sunday Gerald Harper, 34, was reported in satisfactory condition in hospital in this Fraser Valley community after he collided with the plane above the Matsqui Skydiving Club grounds on Saturday.

Lost Angler Safe

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 20-year-old University of British Columbia student who was separated from two companions while fishing Friday in Deek's Creek, 22 kilometres north of here, spent a cold night covered with branches before walking to safety. John Shakour, wearing only a shirt and jeans and without food, decided to spend the night in the woods after failing to find a logging trail.

FIRM CHEERS MILFOIL PLOW

RICHMOND (CP) — The federal government is backing an inventor here, who believes he has designed an underwater weed plow which will effectively remove Eurasian milfoil plaguing the Okanagan Lakes.

Wes Maggs, owner-manager of Fraser Burrard Diving Ltd., said he is happy about the announcement Friday by federal Environment Minister Len Marchand that his firm has been awarded a $94,000 contract to design and construct the plow.

Maggs, a graduate in metallurgical engineering, said his design is still at the blueprint stage.

"I can't explain very well what it looks like," he said. "The nearest comparison I can think of is a motor grader or a bulldozer."

Maggs said the operator sits on tower-like structure above the water while operating the blade that plows the milfoil from the lake's bottom.

"The blade uproots the milfoil weed from six inches into the sediment bottom of the lake and is capable of operating in 30 feet of water," he said, explaining that milfoil grows only to a depth of 18 feet.

Maggs estimated it will cost $525 an acre to operate the plow on its first pass at the weeds, and $275 acre on future passes. He said the milfoil would probably have to be replowed once every two to three years.

Flea Collars Hazard?

BURNABY (CP) — The medical health director of the Simon Fraser Health Unit here has instructed his nurses to warn pregnant women that chemicals in flea collars on household pets could cause genetic mutations in their unborn babies.

Dr. John Blatherwick said Friday he agrees with a recently released provincial ministry of agriculture report that states the dioxin content of some flea collars is unsafe.

Dr. Blatherwick said prospective mothers should be made aware of the potential genetic harm which might result from close contact with pets wearing collars containing the dangerous chemical.

Dr. Bernard Hayes, the field veterinarian at the ministry of agriculture who reported on the potential hazard, said the same chemical, known as dichlorvos, used in some flea collars, is also present in the Vapona no-pest strip manufactured by Shell Canada.

There are written precautions on the back of Vacona warning that the strip be kept away from children.

The pest control branch of the ministry of agriculture said dichlorvos is an organophosphate with a high toxicity level, a teaspoon of which, if taken orally by an adult, would be lethal.

Sun Column Called Racist

Human Rights Director Kathleen Ruff has accused The Vancouver Sun of publishing racist material in printing part of a column by Doug Collins which appeared Friday in the evening newspaper.

"I want to condemn The Vancouver Sun for publishing racist material," said Ruff in a statement. "There is no question that at this point in time there are people in B.C. whose minds are warped by feelings of racial superiority.

"This material feeds such hatred, paranoia and bigotry.

The column included observations about pictures in a federal advertisement about immigration.

It says: "Most of the first page shows a happy, smiling white family. They could even be Canadians. Unfortunately the yearly immigration statistics are in and they show — as usual — that a good half of the immigrants coming in don't look like that at all."

The column goes on to point out the country of origin of immigrants and says that the pictures in the booklet show no blacks at all and even the browns look white.

Ruff said Collins is a hypocrite and a coward because he never comes right out in the open and clearly says what he wants to say.

"I think he should do so and not hide behind inference which is cowardly and hypocritical."

She said said many Canadians have fought and died to put an end to fascist regimes which supported the view that non-whites and Jews are racially inferior.

"These words promote a climate whereby to be a Canadian is to have to be white and where those who do not have a white skin are seen as second class and not welcome," she said.

"The Sun cannot hide behind freedom of speech."

She said it would have been better for the human rights commission to speak out against the column but she decided to speak because the commission is currently non-existent.

Its term ended last December and the Social Credit government has not appointed a new commission.

Terms Accepted

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police union members voted 84 per cent Sunday in favor of several conditions of a proposed one-year contract, said a union spokesman.

He said members approved a six-per-cent wage increase, a clothing allowance and a shift differential clause. The main issue in contract talks is an increase in the number of two-man patrol cars.

Industrial inquiry commissioner Bert Blair was expected to present a report to Labor Minister Allan Williams on the dispute sometime this week.

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

British yachtsman and author Eric Hiscock is considered the modern-day version of his late countryman, C. S. Forester, who thrilled readers with the famous Hornblower series.

They stopped off in Tahiti and at Hilo in the Hawaiian Islands, making the final leg in 28 days.

Hiscock has just completed another book called Come Aboard, which describes their life in a trip from New Zealand to Britain and back to New Zealand.

The Hiscocks were married in 1941 during the Second World War. Hiscock had given up writing about his single-handed cruises to join the Royal Navy, first as chief engineer on a submarine chaser and later to serve in the Admiralty Ferry Service.

After the war the Hiscocks took to the sea in the 30-foot Wanderer III, probably the best-known cruising boat in the world.

The Hiscocks circumnavigated the world twice in the craft, which had only a four-horsepower motor, and were awarded the Cruising Club of America's Blue Water Medal for their achievements.

In the 11 years the Hiscocks have had Wanderer IV they have spent only five nights on land. That was when they were in South Africa and Hiscock was in demand for a lecture tour in Rhodesia.

Hiscock has lectured in Toronto but this is the first time he and his wife have seen western Canada.

They decided to head to this coast after making several Victoria friends during their wanderings. Among them are businessman Tom Denny and his wife, Margaret, and Stephen and Esther Dickinson of Van Isle Marina.

Hiscock was recently made an honorary member of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club in recognition of his accomplishments.

He turned 70 in March and though his eyesight is failing he still shoots noon sights of the sun while his wife shoots the stars when necessary.

Hiscock says if Canadian immigration officials agree, Wanderer IV will winter here at the Van Isle Marina so that the Hiscocks can explore the cruising waters of this area.

It may be Vancouver Island will be featured in the next book that comes off Hiscock's typewriter.

City to Enforce Nude Cover-Up

Victoria parks committee chairman Ald. Robin Blencoe said today he does not believe city council should designate part of Thetis Lake Park as a nude bathing area.

"I don't think it fits, yet," he said. "I am not prepared to recommend any change at this time."

Both Blencoe and city parks administrator Cliff Bate confirmed that parks department patrolmen and RCMP will enforce the prohibition against nudity in the bylaw governing Thetis Lake Park.

The comments came after about ~~two dozen~~ nude sunbathers at Prior Lake — a small lake northeast of Thetis with access from Highland Road — were warned by police Saturday that they would be prosecuted unless they covered up.

One member of the group later complained that they could not understand why they were being hassled, considering the remoteness of the spot and the apparent lack of complaints from other park users.

But Blencoe said the Prior Lake nudity is a constant subject for complaints from those who are offended by the activity.

"We have a bylaw and my problem is that I have to enforce that bylaw," he said.

Bate stressed that the lake is not as secluded as some of the naked fraternity claim. He noted it is adjacent to a well-travelled public road (Highland) and recalled that last year there were complaints that young men had been seen walking nude to their cars parked on the road.

"We are telling our people to enforce the bylaw. We are trying to control the activity before it gets out of hand," he added.

A Colwood RCMP spokesman said today no charges were laid as a result of the weekend incidents, and there have been no charges so far this summer.

He said the officer in question was visiting the area on his regular patrol, adding: "We're always in there."

Howard Society Praises New Prison Rules

John Howard Society Island board chairman Dr. Keith Jobson said today he is pleasantly surprised by new regulations for provincial correctional centres announced Friday by Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

Gardom said the changes will give prisoners' rights greater recognition and ensure prisoners will be dealt with in a fairer manner.

Jobson applauded the proposals, saying any introduction of change is usually met with resistance from within the system.

He said clarification and restructuring of of the disciplinary processes is an important step because present procedures are like "kangaroo courts."

Jobson said setting definitive standards for prisoner segregation and solitary confinement will make sure solitary is not abused.

"The grievance procedure is laughable and in desperate need of upgrading. Anything is bound to be an improvement."

Jobson said the tightening of all guidelines — leaving less possibility for interpretation on the part of prison staff — is very important because while staff may believe they are acting reasonably, discretion is crucial where people's rights are involved,

The new regulations are based on a five-year study.

Car Chase Nets Theft Charges

Two Saanich juveniles were charged with car theft today after an early-morning chase that started in the Broadmead area and ended at the corner of Royal Oak Drive and Cordova Bay Road.

Five police cars were involved in the pursuit after a vehicle failed to stop when waved over by a patrolling officer at 3:30 this morning.

After a short chase the car was abandoned by the two youths, aged 14 and 16, who fled into a wooded area. Saanich police soon apprehended them.

The vehicle had been stolen in Victoria.

Weather Hinders Search

Bad weather is hampering an air search today for a light aircraft that developed engine trouble Sunday evening and crash-landed on a small unnamed lake 50 miles south of Williams Lake.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt said it is believed there were two persons aboard.

The spokesman said the pilot contacted a Canadian Pacific Airlines plane flying overhead to Vancouver and reported no one was injured.

A small RCMP Beaver craft from Kamloops is attempting to reach the area and a Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox will try to locate the downed plane as soon as the weather lifts.

Ferry Traffic on Rise

B.C. Ferries traffic in June was up significantly over the same month last year on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen and Horseshoe Bay-Departure Bay runs.

Conny Yzenbrandt, supervisor in the Crown corporation's traffic department, said today June's figures show the level of passenger and vehicle traffic is nearly back to what it was prior to the rate hikes of June, 1976.

She said traffic is still five per cent below what it was in June, 1975, but ferry officials expect that gap to be narrowed in the next two months when the effect of rate reductions in June, 1977, will be felt.

Passenger traffic out of Swartz Bay was up 18 per cent last month compared with June, 1977, and up 19 per cent out of Tsawwassen. The figures were 19½ and 16 per cent for Horseshoe Bay and Departure Bay respectively.

Vehicle traffic out of Tsawwassen in June was up 18½ per cent over last year and 16 per cent out of Swartz Bay. There were 18 per cent more vehicles out of Horseshoe Bay and 16 per cent more out of Departure Bay than the previous year.

Yzenbrandt said ferry officials feel the traffic levels are right on target. She added that the six to eight more sailings on the Swartz Bay-Tswawwassen run than in 1975 allow more people to be accommodated without having ferry overloads.

Luxury Wasted on Smallboat People

FROM OUR FRONT porch this morning, my wife and I watched a trim outboard cruiser roll down the highway on a trailer towed by a camper van. Until about half an hour earlier, that cruiser had been ours. Then it became the property of a Nanaimo couple who seemed as happy to acquire it as Win and I were to get rid of it.

Not that there's anything wrong with it in the way of hidden flaws or temperamental quirks. It's an honest boat, sturdily built of aluminum by one of this continent's most reputable manufacturers. The plain fact of the matter is that it was too good a boat for us.

For many years before we bought it, we'd got along happily enough with a second-hand plywood 12-footer. The Victoria carpenter who whacked it together from a "Popular Mechanics" plan had put it to hard use before he sold it to us for $125.

I treated it to comfortable new seats of yellow cedar, gave it a fresh coat of paint, and hung a low-horsepower outboard motor on its transom.

It never acquired the dignity of a name. Through the years, it remained simply "The Boat."

Our children graduated from grilse to salmon in it. More than once, we were caught out in it in weather that would have daunted a vessel twice its size. But it always brought us safely home.

As time passed, it began to show its age. Increasingly, its bottom became a patchwork of weathered plywood and marine filler compound. A gale plucked it off the lee-shore beach where we foolishly left it in a gamble with October weather and punched a hole in its side.

I patched it up and returned it to service for another batch of years. When we quitted Victoria, it came north with us on its trailer to new adventures.

In a maritime world given over to fibreglas and aluminum hulls, our boat became an interesting antique.

Tommy the resortman would load it as carefully as an eggshell on to the cart that rattles down his little marine railway. When it slipped into the saltchuck — and stayed afloat — he would loose a sigh of relief.

"You know," he'd say, "you really ought to think of getting a new boat."

Then at a sportsmen's show last year, we fell for a smart new outboard cruiser. It had a windshield up front and a brawny motor behind, upholstered seats that flattened to provide beds for overnight trips, and a sure-enough steering wheel.

The salesman set up a demonstration. The cruiser proved to be fast, sweet to handle, and seakind. Enchanted, we bought it.

As proud new owners, we lost no time in launching out for a day's fishing.

"Oh boy," I crowed to my dear one as we shoved off. "No more squatting in the smokey end of an open boat hanging on to a blasted tiller."

We fished in cushioned luxury, our rods trolling from twin holders let into the sides well aft. But we didn't stay out very long, and I found Win curiously quiet on the drive home.

"Something the matter?" I asked her.

"No, no," she said. "Nothing at all."

Not until we had another trip under our belts did we arrive at the mutual truth.

We cranked the cruiser on to its trailer, and drove up off the launching ramp.

"I hate to say this," I told Win, "but I think we made a mistake."

"Me too," Win said. "It's a lovely boat, but nothing feels right. I can't curl up in the nose with a bag of potato chips."

I said, "I like to run a boat from the sternsheets, not jammed up forward behind a steering wheel."

Win said, "It seems all wrong, not being able to keep an eye on the rods." She considered, then said, "I guess luxury is wasted on us. We're smallboat people."

And to our profound relief, smallboat people we once again are. We can't get our old plywood boat back, more's the pity. But we hope to find a workhorse open job as much like it as possible.

Brush Fire Breakout In Saanich

A Saanich fire department official today urged area residents to be extremely cautious around wooded areas after brush flare-ups kept firefighters hopping Sunday.

A grass fire raced over open land at the corner of Quayle and Interurban Roads Sunday at 3 p.m. and while it was still smoking another blaze started on Peacock Hill about 5 p.m. The hill is in the middle of a residential section bounded by Cook, Maywood and Bellevue streets.

No houses were damaged in either fire.

"There have been several brush fires," said a fire department official. "The grass and everything is extremely dry and people should be reminded to use extreme caution. Of course all outside burning is forbidden."

'How Sweet It Is' For Mussels Now

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Victory — how sweet it is.

That's more than a mere figure of speech as far as Victoria Mussels are concerned. The Mussels reeled off their second and third consecutive Northwest League baseball victories on the weekend at Royal Athletic Park, downing Salem Senators 9-3 Sunday night and 8-2 Saturday afternoon, and you can credit an assist to Kay Chapman.

Kay is the mother of Mussels' playing manager Jim Chapman and GM Lynn Chapman. Before last Friday night's game, in which Victoria beat Eugene Emeralds 5-4 to start the winning string, she sent a bag of candies down to the dugout for the players. She did the same Saturday and Sunday and you can bet she'll send another sack of goodies down tonight when the Mussels and Senators close out their three-game series with a 6 p.m. contest at Athletic Park.

The candies instilled some hitting energy as the Mussels broke out for a dozen safeties Saturday and eight more Sunday to stake pitchers Dale Mohorcic and Scott Harding to the wins, Victoria's sixth and seventh against 12 losses.

Harding earned his first victory as a starter Sunday to go against one loss in relief. He logged 7⅔ innings of smart mound work, mixing a good fastball with excellent off-speed deliveries in the middle innings. His control was a plus, too, as he walked only one. He fanned two.

Brian Peterson relieved him in the eighth when Salem, down 5-3 at that point, produced a couple of base runners. But Peterson struck out pinch-hitter Steve Necoechea on three pitches to pick up the save.

Mussels broke the game open in their half of the eighth with four unearned runs on only one hit, Doug Morganti's single. Two infield errors, a pair of passed balls, a wild pitch, a base on ball and a balk with runners at second and third sealed losing pitcher Danny Coulon's fate. Coulon went the dictance, walking five, hitting one batter and striking out seven.

Mussels fell behind in the first when a single by Grady Fuson, Tom Moore's double and another single by Darryl Cias plated two runs. But Victoria went ahead 3-2 in the second when Chapman singled home Paul Kirsch and Kevin Newby, then stole second, moved to third on a passed ball and scored on Al Alpaugh's single up the middle.

Chapman singled home Steve Kasunic in the fourth but Salem got that one back in the fifth on Cias' bases-empty blast over the scoreboard in left-centpe.

Victoria made it 5-3 in the seventh when Jim Thaaman's towering fly back of second landed beyond everyone's reach for a run-scoring double.

Chapman led the way with two hits in three trips and three runs-batted-in while Alpaugh and Thaaman each went two-for-four with an RBI. Cias and Dan Bongiovanni each had three safeties for Salem, Cias' hits including a double as well as the homer.

Designated hitter Dan Gans shared the hero's role with Mohorcic Saturday, breaking open a 1-0 game in the third with a three-run homer to right off loser Larry Pekarcik (4-2). Gans also singled and finished up with five RBIs. Alpaugh had three hits for the Mussels while Thaaman and Mike Carey joined Gans in the two-hit circle.

Mohorcic, now 1-1, had good control Saturday, scattering 10 hits and walking just one. He struck out six in going the route.

EXTRA BASES — Mussel right fielder Kevin Newby suffered what could be a pulled hamstring Sunday and was replaced by Bob Potts in the sixth . . . The game was nine minutes late starting when plate umpire Randy Knuths phoned Northwest League president Bob Richmond in Eugene to get clearance for the managers and coaches to wear jackets outside their uniforms. League rules say numbered uniforms must be worn outside any other attire . . . Mussels were magnanimous in victory Sunday, providing a free hot drink to all 289 fans who sat through the cold . . . There were 339 at Saturday afternoon's game . . . It's golden age night tonight at Athletic Park with senior citizens admitted for $2. Vic Rapp: As Tough This Time Around?

One year ago Vic Rapp didn't know B.C. Lions and the Lions didn't know him. He came at them like a street fighter swinging a bicycle chain and when the wounds had healed he had himself a football team.

Only Rapp knows—and he'll never say—how much of his tough guy approach was dictated by circumstance and how much was calculated.

He was a rookie head coach. Others in similar situations have been run off by veterans because the new man won't risk alienating them. When Wayne Smith reported late from the all-star game and refused to pay the $100 fine, Rapp suspended him and announced that he would never play for the Lions again—that if he couldn't be traded he'd be released. The message got through: there was only one boss.

In mid-season, when things were going well, another story circulated: that Rapp asked one of his top Canadians to stand up, praised him for how well he was playing, then said: "You have been late for two meetings. If you're late once more, you're gone." It has never been confirmed, but it fits.

Rapp came to a losing team in an atmosphere widely hailed as country club west. He turned it around with liberal use of the two-by-four and he became Canadian football's coach of the year. Now he has his own act to follow, and in a sense it's every bit as tough a test.

"I hope he loosens up a bit this year," a vet told me before camp. "Being tough is fine with a losing team and the guys would take it because he was making it work and we were winning. But now some of those same guys are coming off a big year so there shouldn't be as much to be tough about. It would be nice if he'd be more part of the team than a guy on the outside running it. You know, if he'd kind of relax."

The comment was relayed to Rapp Sunday as he looked ahead to Tuesday's league opener with Winnipeg Blue Bombers. He mulled it over a bit, then said, "I know what he's saying, and our approach this year may have been a little easier because this time we knew the personnel from the start and they knew what we expected from them—but basically we're not going at it any differently. I don't see that we will, or that there'll be any problems."

Nor has there been—but it's indicative of Rapp's situation that people are wondering. When he started the 1977 season no one knew what to expect and every victory was a bonus. Now he is the coach of the year, the man who runs the team that went from nowhere to the western final. They know what to expect now. They expect at least a repeat performance. And this time teams won't be strolling in fat asking to be ambushed.

There is another facet to the opening game that rates watching. Eighteen months ago Rapp was the veteran assistant to coach Ray Jauch in Edmonton. In his tenure there, Rapp and Jauch has grown quite close. When Jauch became general manager it was widely assumed that Rapp would finally get his shot at running the team.

He didn't. A rift had developed between him and Jauch late in the 1976 season. The club was not going well and—whether he said it or not—remakrs were attributed to Jauch blaming the offensive game plan, which was Rapp's area. Rapp was passed over in favor of Hugh Campbell, a former CFL all-star but a man whose coaching experience was totally collegiate.

It worked out well for all three parties. Campbell's team went to the Grey Cup game, Rapp made coach of the year, and after a season chaffing in the executive suite Jauch came away with a more lucrative coaching deal in Winnipeg. Tuesday night's game matches them as coaches for the first time. People are making a great deal of this, hinting at vendettas.

Rapp denies it.

"There aren't but four people on this team who give a damn how I feel about Edmonton or Jauch," (the four ex-Eskimos) he snorts. "The other 29 couldn't care less. When you go into a game thinking more about personalities than about the game, you're making one hell of a mistake."

Still, he is an intensively competitive man who was badly stung when the Edmonton offer didn't come. Nor is he known as a particularly forgiving one.

At camp this year Lorenzo Turner, perhaps his best recruit at middle linebacker walked out saying his mind wasn't on football. A few days later he phoned and asked to come back. "No way," said Rapp, who still needed a middle linebacker. It was in line with an oft-repeated part of his philosophy: "Screw me once, it's your fault. Screw me twice, it's my fault. You'll never get a chance to screw me twice."

A little left-over venom from the Jauch situation would not be out of character. For the same reason—plus the small matter of the 38-1 loss to the Eskimos in the western final—games against Edmonton take on a special shading. It would be illogical to think otherwise.

Meanwhile there is the matter of the league opener and a Winnipeg team that has a score of its own to settle. Jauch may have changed the Bomber system but the personnel is essentially the same. They remember the 33-32 loss in the western semi-final, a game stolen from them by the length of Joe Fourqurean's finger on perhaps the finest defensive play of the season.

Had Fourqurean not made that play the Bombers would have been in the final, Bud Riley might still be coaching them, Jauch might still be in the Edmonton executive suite and the extra dimension to Tuesday's first meeting—Jauch vs Rapp—might never have developed. It is, indeed, a game of inches.

Visitors Bounce Back To Split 'Super Series'

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

It was probably the fairest way after all that Santa Rosa Guanella Bros. and Victoria Budgets ended up all even in their four-game softball "Super Series" at Royal Athletic Park on the weekend.

While Budgets had to come back to win the second game and get a split in Saturday's opening twin-bill, Santa Rosa returned the favor Sunday, Budgets winning the first 2-0 and Santa Rosa taking the second 8-5.

On Saturday, Santa Rosa took the opener 2-1 and Budgets the second game 3-2.

Third baseman Randy Benn of Budgets provided the dramatic touch in Sunday's opener when he hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the seventh to break up a pitcher's duel between K.G. Fencher of Santa Rosa and Dave Wilson of Budgets.

Catcher Alden Govenlock had opened the seventh with a single. Reg Underwood forced him at second and then Benn did his trick.

Wilson allowed six hits and walked only one batter.

In the second game, Santa Rosa jumped all over Budget starter Andy Konopacki in the second inning, scoring five runs.

Chuck D'Arcy of Santa Rosa was a double winner on the mound for Santa Rosa. He went the route in the second game Sunday, allowing seven hits. On Saturday he let Budgets down with three in the 2-1 decision.

Oddly enough, Konopacki, Budgets' leading pitcher on the season, took both losses. He now is 16 and three.

Konopacki's problems Sunday started with a base on balls to catcher Jim Marsh. Then, with one out, right fielder Mike Nevin crashed a home run and Santa Rosa led 2-0. Zeke McDowell followed with a single, Dallas Roundtree doubled to score McDowell and John Topolewski hit a home run, scoring Roundtree ahead of him.

Wilson relieved Konopacki and gave up a run in the third. The final two runs came in the seventh off Stan Kern.

Bob Burrows hit a home run, his eighth of the season, for Budgets' first run in the fourth. Then in the seventh Budgets came up with a last-gasp four-run effort that was too little, too late.

Benn started it with a single. After Govenlock flied out, Pete Songhurst reached base when shortstop Terry Ray of Santa Rosa juggled the ball at second while trying for a double play. Dave Williams singled to load the bases and John Green cleared them and scored himself when his single through the middle was misplayed by centre fielder Allena.

Saturday, Santa Rosa broke a 1-1 tie in the first game when Marsh hit a leadoff home run in the seventh. Marsh had scored the tying run for the visitors in the fifth when he doubled and scored on a double by Nevin. Budgets got their run in the third. Songhurst reached base on a fielder's choice and scored on a double by Dennis Eckert.

In the second game, Eckert homered in the first inning to put Budgets ahead. Santa Rosa replied with a show of power in the fourth. Topolewski tripled for the first hit off Stan Kern and Allena got the second, a home run.

Budgets came back in their half of the fourth to win it.

Burrows tied the game with a home run and a rare double steal brought in the winner.

With two out, centre fielder Reg Underwood singled and avanced to third on a single by Green. Underwood then scored, bowling over Marsh on the second half of the steal as Green was safe at second.

Santa Rosa had the bases loaded in the sixth but Kern came through in his old-time style and got the ever-dangerous Marsh, swinging.

Campbell Qualifies For Games Berth

The goal for most was to earn a berth on the national team for the Commonwealth games in Edmonton.

The inclement weather came Saturday when activity was interrupted because of thunderstorms.

Sandwiched between the storms, however, was the only record of the meet as Marjorie Bailey chased fellow Vancouverite Patty Loverock to a time of 11.34 in the women's 100 metres. Bailey stopped the clock at 11.35.

Loverock won the 200 metres Sunday.

The victories earned her the title as outstanding athlete in the meet.

The only others who came close to the Vancouver runner's stature were pentathlete Diane Jones-Konihowski of Edmonton and Carmen Ionesco of Longueuil, Que.

Jones-Konihowski won all five events in the pentathlon on Saturday and easily took the long jump title the next day.

Ionesco won both the women's discus and shot put competitions, the shot put perhaps thanks to an organizational blunder.

Lucette Moreau of Montreal, the national record holder with a mark of 16.96 metres, had been told her event would be held late Saturday afternoon. Moreau received a call at home Saturday morning telling her the shot put competition had started. She was unable to reach the track on time.

Debbie Campbell of Victoria won the 800 metres in 2:04.9.

Campbell finished second in the 400 metres in 54.46. Debbie Scott of Esquimalt was third in the women's 1,500 metres in 4:22.2 and fourth in the 3,000 metres in 9:38.9. Harold Willers of Esquimalt was third in the hammer throw with 52.86.

All first-place finishers in Montreal automatically earned berths on the Canadian team for the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton in early August. A similar meet, with first-place finishers qualifying for the Games' team, will be held in Edmonton next weekend.

The high jumps, the glamour events at all track meets, fell short of expectations.

Greg Joy of Vancouver, the silver-medal winner at the 1976 Montreal Olympic Games, was an easy winner but the victory at 2.18 metres was well short of his Canadian outdoor record of 2.26.

Debbie Brill of Burnaby won the women's high jump with a leap of 1.89 metres. Other winners in men's events included Scott Neilson of British Columbia in the hammer throw; Peter Butler of Calgary in the 5,000; Bruno Pauletto in the shot put; Hugh Fraser of the Viking Track Club in the 100; Glen Colivas of the Vikings in the pole vault; Brian Saunders of Uxbridge Optimists in the 400; Peter Favell of B.C. in the 800.

Macs Dumped In Boxla Brawl

BURNABY — Victoria McDonalds took it on the chin Sunday, dropping a 20-11 Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League decision to league-leading Burnaby Cablevision.

And the loss, during a game in which 171 minutes in penalties were assessed, might have far-reaching repercussions.

A rash of individual fights broke out at 14:15 of the third period and four Victoria and four Burnaby players were sent to their dressing rooms after collecting game misconducts. Wayne Reeve, Mark Roberts, Geoff Whitney-Griffiths and Murray McLaren were ejected for Victoria and Mike O'Reilly, Craig Wilson, Mark Mosdel and Lloyd Symons were sent off for Burnaby.

All will likely receive suspensions.

Burnaby was assessed 87 penalty minutes while Victoria took 84 minutes in penalties. Each team was also assessed four fighting majors.

The loss of these four players might effect Victoria's chances in an important game against second-place New Westminster Salmonbellies at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Bakers are resting in third place, eight points behind New Westminster and only two points ahead of Richmond Roadrunners, who won the other game at the weekend, beating Coquitlam J-Hawks 13-12 in a close struggle Saturday at Richmond.

John Swan scored six goals to lead the Burnaby attack as the hometown club took a 6-2 lead in the first period and then exploded to take a 14-5 lead into the final 20 minutes.

Other Burnaby scorers were Terry Bingley with four goals, and Dan Perreault and Wilson with a pair each. Singles came from Gordie Roberts, Paul Dalmonte, Ken Sim, Alan Kirk, Symons and Mosdel.

Greg Pryde stopped 32 shots in net for Burnaby while Bill Thomas and Mike Duch, who came in at 4:38 of the second period, combined for 41 saves for Victoria.

At Richmond, Bob Johnston scored with 2:11 left in the final period to give Roadrunners the victory.

Smith Dominates Trials

Meanwhile his sister Becky took the women's 400-metre individual medley as she came from behind to nose out Cheryl Gibson of Edmonton.

In other men's finals, Jay Tapp of Toronto won the 100-metre backstroke and Peter Szmidt of Pointe Claire, Que., took the 1,500-metre final.

The other women's finals saw Wendy Quirk of Pointe Claire grab the 400-metre freestyle while Gibson took the top spot in the 200-metre backstroke.

Saturday, Smith won the men's 200-metre breastroke to go along with earlier triumphs in the 200 and 400-metre individual medleys.

Other winners in the events Saturday were Dan Thompson of Toronto in the 100-metre butterfly while Marian Stuart of Pointe Claire took the women's 100-metre breaststroke and Quirk the 200-metre butterfly.

Following the meet, these swimmers were selected for the Commonwealth Games team:

Single Point for Rocks Could Prove Valuable

Victoria Shamrocks gained a point that may stand them in good stead while Nanaimo Timbermen proved a point that the 'Rocks won't soon forget in a Western Lacrosse Association game at Nanaimo Saturday night.

The two clubs battled to a 13-13 overtime tie as the Timbermen rallied from a four-goal deficit, at 13-9, with just four minutes to play.

For the Shamrocks, it was their first point at Nanaimo this season after losing two earlier games there.

However, they now have 24 points and a six-point lead over both Nanaimo and Vancouver in the league race and that single point harvested Saturday may give them a lock on first place.

For if the Shamrocks happen to end up in a point tie with either Vancouver or Nanaimo, they would have the edge in the tie-breaking system since they have already won the season's series from both Burrards and Timbermen.

As for the T-Men, they proved to the Rocks that you can't take a four-goal lead lightly.

And the rally that got Nanaimo even was the same type manouevre that cost the Shamrocks in the first meeting at Nanaimo this season. Coach Ken Alexander pulled his goalkeeper Mac Maude in favor of an extra attacker and it paid off—three times.

Former Shamrock Mike Walsh scored at 16:42, Alexander at 18:02 and Walsh again at 19:06.

Before that, it appeared the Shamrocks had things sewn up.

They had come from behind an early Timbermen lead to lead 10-9 after two with Ron MacNeil and Norm Baker showing the way.

MacNeil scored six goals and had two assists while Baker had four goals and three assists.

Alexander had four goals and an assist for the Timbermen. Walsh had three goals and two assists while Bob Cool and WLA scoring leader Brian Evans each had a goal and five assists.

In the overtime, goalie Larry Smeltzer of the Shamrocks was instrumental in preserving the tie for the Rocks and Maude was equally as impressive for the Timbermen.

Meanwhile, another possible playoff voice was heard in Coquitlam. The Adanacs kept their faint hopes alive with a 13-9 victory over New Westminster Salmonbellies.

Coquitlam now has 11 points, six behind the fourth-place Salmonbellies.

Jim Aitchison scored three goals for the winners and Bob Tasker notched three to lead the Salmonbellies.

Shamrocks are at home on Wednesday to Coquitlam.

CLOSE BATTLE IN PAIRS FINAL

Don Brown and Vince Sutherland edged Bob McQuillan and Graham Jarvis 19-18 in an all-Vancouver South final to the British Columbia pairs lawn bowling championship Sunday on Victoria West greens.

Victory also earned the duo a berth in the Canadian championships at Halifax next month.

Sutherland scored two in the 20th end. Jarvis then got a single and a measurement was required for what could have been a second, and tying, point. Sutherland won on the measurement.

Earlier in the day, McQuillan and Jarvis eliminated Tom McKeachie and Chuck Davies of Victoria, 19-4.

On Saturday, McKeachie and Davies handed Brown and Sutherland their first loss in the playdown 22-12 while McQuillan and Jarvis ousted Syd Smethurst and Jack McQuillan of Burnside, 19-15.

In women's competition, Marg Atherton and Jessie Kinneard steered their squads to victory in the Dogwood triples competition and advanced to the B.C. tournament this weekend in Vancouver.

Leona Peterson and Ivy McLeod complete the Atherton trio while Marie Sage and Flora Martin round out the Kinneard threesome.

Representing the Island in the B.C. Games competition will be Lillian Dixon and Marge Jones of Nanaimo (doubles); Ethel McFarlane, Sue Belton and Agnes Davies (triples), and Elsie Young, Gladys Willets, Mabel Wilson and Gladys Court (rinks).

Hector Sparks Caps To Win Over Dallas

Times News Services

Kevin Hector scored one goal and set up another Saturday night as Vancouver Whitecaps downed Dallas Tornado 2-1 in a North American Soccer League game at Dallas.

Hector took a pass from Alan Hinton and headed the ball into the goal at 42:42. He then passed the ball at 47:16 to Bobby Campbell who scored Vancouver's second goal.

Dallas's hopes flared briefly at 70:32 when Max Thompson scored his second goal of the year with a solo performance that ended with him flattening defender Peter Daniel and firing the ball past Vancouver goalkeeper Phil Parks.

Despite attacking the Vancouver goal 26 more times, the Tornado could not register another goal.

The Vancouver victory leaves the Whitecaps with a 16-6 record and Dallas at 12-10. Vancouver is seven points behind Portland in the Western Division.

On Sunday, Mike Flanagan put on a one-man show with a five-goal performance to tie a North American Soccer League scoring record as New England Tea Men defeated California Surf 5-2.

Ron Moore, then playing with Chicago Sting, was the last player to score five goals in one game. Moore's feat occurred last season against Vancouver. Giorgio Chinaglia of New York Cosmos in 1976 and Steve David of Miami in 1975 are the others to score five goals in one game.

The five goals gave Flanagan 27 for the season, tops in the NASL.

The league record for most goal in one season—30 was set in 1968 by John Kowalik and Cirilo Fernandez.

In other games Sunday, Toronto Metros-Croatia defeated Memphis Rogues 4-1, Chicago Sting dumped Colorado Caribous 4-1, Fort Lauderdale Strikers dropped Houston Hurricane 2-1 and Los Angeles Aztecs beat San Jose Earthquakes 4-2.

At Chicago, Jene Strenicer scored two goals and the Sting kept their playoff hopes alive with their fourth consecutive victory at home.

At Houston, David Irving scored two goals in the second half as Fort Lauderdale handed Houston its fifth straight loss.

At San Jose, Austin Hayes scored two goals to lead the Aztecs to their 4-2 victory:

First Victory For Nanaimo

Nanaimo posted its first victory in five starts Sunday, beating a weakened Albion side by 63 runs in Victoria and District Cricket Association play at Nanaimo.

On Saturday, Incogs firmed up a hold on first place, tripping Saanich by 91 runs at the University of Victoria.

Nanaimo took first knock and ran up 177 runs for nine wickets with Mac Dube scoring 74, not out, and Fred Graves addding 35. John Calendar set the Albion bowling pace by toppling four wickets for the loss of 44 runs.

Calendar then scored 31 and John Buchanan added 29 to lead Albion to 114 against some excellent Nanaimo bowling. Ray Telford took four for 12 and Tim Loasby downed four for 23.

Albion were short several key players who are with the league representative Vagabonds, currently touring England.

Incogs scored 152 for six with Eric Kjekstad scoring 61 and Jeremy Goodwin adding 47. Terry Bateman led Saanich bowlers at five for 63.

Saanich was all out at 61, with Peter Howe getting 28. Rob Wilson (six for 26), Anton Larson (two for 14) and Dave Gladders (two for 12) were the top Incog bowlers.

Hollywood Wins Playoff

Stan Hunt intercepted a Jack Patrick pass and went for a touchdown Sunday at Braefoot Elementary School to give Hollywood Park a 7-4 victory over Ex-Drakes in the playoff final of the Saanich Flag Football League.

In semi-final games earlier Sunday, Hollywood clipped Black Crush 14-7 and Ex-Drakes cut down Pacific Logging 25-12.

Seeds Ousted In City Tennis

Three major upsets dominated weekend action in the men's division of the annual Victoria City tennis championships at the Oak Bay Tennis Club.

Unseeded Peter Crawford surprised third seed Tony Simnett 6-3, 1-6, 6-3; Art Hobbs trimmed sixth seed Joe Lachmund 6-1, 6-2; and John Nichol won from eighth seed Timo Markkanen 6-3, 6-3.

All advanced to the quarter finals along with first seed Russ Hartley, Trevor Smyth, Marty Taylor, Scott Braley and Peter Smythe.

Hartley almost came a cropper at the hands of Glen Bradshaw before rallying from a 4-1 deficit in the final set to win five straight games and defeat Bradshaw 6-3, 3-6, 6-4. Braley defeated Dave Wilson 6-1, 6-4, and Smythe won from Trevor Jones 6-2, 6-2. Taylor won by default.

The women were more orderly as Enid Jackson, Liz Ellis, Ann Graham, Val Brice, Jean Shaw, Leslie Kerr, Sandra Moss and Stone advanced to the quarter finals.

The tournament continues all week.

Protest Futile

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Bobby Allison, in an AMC Matador, was finally declared the winner of the Miller 200 stock car race Sunday when the United States Auto Club ruled he did not make an illegal pit stop under the yellow flag.

Sal Tovella finished second in a Volare and Dave Watson was third in a Skylark.

Allison and Tovella originally agreed to go along with the ruling but when Allison was declared the offical winner, Tovella's crew registered a protest.

Two and one-half hours of conflict followed Allison's apparent victory when Tovella's crew signalled for him to stop next to the winner's circle. Tovella's crew was under the impression that Allison was one lap behind at the end of the 200-mile race on the one-mile paved oval at State Fair park.

A.J. Foyt finished fourth in a Camaro after leading most of the race. Bay Darnell was fifth in a Camaro.

Allison picked up $9,922 for the victory.

Pace Triumph

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Armbro Tiger overcame Falcon Almahurst just before the wire and won the Cane Pace by three-quarters of a length Saturday night at Yonkers Raceway, pacing the mile in 1:59 1-5.

Hustlers Share Lead

Hampton Park Hustlers moved into a share of first place with Esquimalt Universal Sheet Metal by beating Esquimalt 13-10 in a rough-and-tumble South Island Senior "B" Lacrosse League game Sunday at Pearkes Arena.

Victoria Athletics, the long-time cellar-dwellers of the league, romped to a 22-14 win over Saanich Metro Honda in the other tussle.

Rob Clifford set the pace for Hustlers with six goals and three assists while Mike Beaulac (three and four), Mike Yager (two and two) and Tom Somner (one and two) played leading roles.

Rick LaPointe (four and one), Brian Spaven (two and three) and Randy Bryant (one and two) led Esquimalt.

A bench-clearing brawl at 19:59 of the third period produced game misconducts for LaPointe and Don McNeil of Hustlers. League commissioner Hugh Reston announced the teams would be fined $50 each for the incident and that suspensions would be levied.

Athletics were led by Mark Schoor, who scored five goals and assisted on four others while Bill Marechek scored four goals and had three assists. Dennis Begley and Dave Johnson also scored four goals each.

Junior-recruit Lyle Gurney set the pace for Saanich with two goals and seven assists while Bill Van Buskirk led scoring with five goals and Bruce Richman scored three.

Muncey Replaces Engine, Stretches Streak to Four

MADISON, Ind. (AP) — Bill Muncey replaced his powerplant after blowing an engine on the second heat Sunday, then won the Indiana Governor's Cup regatta for his fourth straight victory this season on the unlimited hydroplane national circuit.

Muncey won his first preliminary heat, but his giant thunderboat went dead on the fourth lap of the second heat in a close battle with defending national champion Ron Snyder.

Snyder was third in the first heat and went on to win the second heat easily but wound up third in the Governor's Cup race. Chip Hanauer finished second in the final race, 40 seconds behind Muncey.

SMILING IN DEFEAT is Lee Trevino as he embraces winner Lee Elder on the eighth hole of a sudden-death playoff at the Milwaukee Open golf tournament Sunday. Trevino took a bogey four on the par-three hole when he missed a six-foot putt.(AP wirephoto).

Ker Caught On Last Lap

Jim Caudwell barely won his fifth main event in six starts Saturday, grabbing the lead on the final lap of 50-lap feature race for the July Cup before a crowd of 3,150 car-racing fans at Western Speedway.

The super-stock points leader trailed for 49 laps before catching Orton Ker on the backstretch and taking the checkered flag in front of the largest crowd of the season at the Langford oval.

Ker, who has been plagued by mechanical difficulties since the season opened, appeared to have his 1974 Camaro in good running order and led the pack most of the way.

Caudwell, who has now won three straight features, came from well back in the 20-car field and was held off by Larry Pollard in the closing stages before getting by to make the charge at Ker.

Pollard, the only other main event winner this season, finished third and Terry Forsyth was fourth.

Greg Court won the "B" dash and posted an upset over Caudwell in the heat race. But Caudwell won the "A" dash and had fast time of the night of 18.18 seconds.

In the stock car section of the program, Dean Cramb held off points leader Gordie Stone to win the 35-lap feature.

Cramb had to battle Stone for the final 15 laps before collecting his first win of the season.

Jesper Lind won the "B" main.

Elder Beats Trevino In Eight-Hole Playoff

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Lee Elder, once again an automatic qualifier for the prestigious Masters and Tournament of Champions, readily admits the real winner Sunday was the Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament.

The reason, Elder said, is the class of Lee Trevino, whom Elder defeated Sunday in an eight-hole, sudden-death playoff for the title in the star-slighted tournament.

"I think the fact that Lee came here and played as hard as he did when he planned to go to England right afterward for the British Open says something about what kind of man he is," Elder, who earned $30,000 for the victory, said.

Trevino, whose $17,100 pay cheque for second place put him into third spot on the tour's earnings list for the year at $198,420, was one of the few big names to play in this tournament. Many stars skipped it in preparation for the British Open starting Wednesday at St. Andrew's, Scotland.

Trevino said that despite his defeat—assured when his six-foot putt rolled dead at the lip of the cup on the 197-yard, par-three eighth extra hole for a bogey—he will continue to support the Milwaukee tournament.

"I'm very happy for Lee Elder and for the tournament," Trevino said. "This is probably the best thing that could happen to the GMO. All week long I felt I could win this thing, but it just wasn't meant to be. But I'll be back next year."

Dave Barr, a tour rookie from Kelowna, B.C., shot a final-round 71 to finish four shots back and collect $6,200.

Jane Wins In a Breeze

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Jane Blalock, playing what she called "the most consistent golf of my life," won her second consecutive LPGA tournament title Sunday, breezing to a seven-shot victory in the $75,000 Wheeling LPGA Classic.

Blalock shot a safe, consistent par-72 after all but wrapping up the title Saturday when she fired a five-under 67. That gave her a seven-shot lead going into the final round.

Her 72, coupled with earlier rounds of 68 and 67, enabled her to break by two strokes the Wheeling tournament scoring record of 209 set last year by Debbie Austin.

Blalock, who won here two years ago in a playoff with Pat Bradley, was never in any trouble. Kathy Martin, a non-winner in seven years on the tour, fired a two-under par 70 to finish second at 214.

JoAnne Carner, the 1978 Peter Jackson Classic winner in Toronto in June, was another shot back at 215 with Australian Penny Pulz. Carner and Pulz both had a final round 71s.

Sanra Post of Oakville, Ont., who now makes her home in Florida, blew to an 82 and finished at 224. She had been second after play Saturday with earlier rounds of 71-71.

Jocelyn Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., fired a 75 Sunday for a 54-hole score of 230 while Dale Shaw of Sidney, B.C., had a 78 for 232.

Blalock's margin of victory was the biggest in a 54-hole tournament on the tour this year.

Slow Players Hit with Fines

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Four entrants in the Milwaukee Open that ended Sunday were fined $200 each for slow play under the Professional Golfers Association's new pace-of-play rule.

Don Pooley, Buddy Gardner, Mark Pfeil and Morris Hatalsky took too much time between shots and forced groups behind them to wait during the second round on Friday, the PGA said.

SURPRISING CANADIANS CAPTURE WORLD TITLE

STOCKPORT, England (AP) — Canada pulled off a major upset Saturday by defeating the defending-champion United States 17-16 in overtime to win the 1978 world field lacrosse championship.

Smarting from a 28-4 lashing by the U.S. squad five days earlier, the Canadians — on Stan Cockerton's goal in the final minute of overtime — rebounded by handing the Americans their first defeat in the world championships since the competition began in 1967.

Cockerton, from Vancouver, was the scoring star of the game with six goals. Jim Calder of Niagara Falls, Ont., and John Grant and Jim Wasson, both of Peterborough, Ont., had two apiece. Mike French of Owen Sound, Ont., Dave Durante of Coquitlam, B.C., John Mouradian of Windsor, Ont., and David Huntley and Bob Burke, both of Toronto, were the other Canadian scorers.

The Canadians looked extremely sharp in the first quarter, with Calder and Grant each scoring twice and the Americans hardpressed to mount a concerted attack, despite a goal after just 15 seconds from Bill Marino.

In the second quarter, the U.S. pulled back from an 8-4 deficit to trail 10-9 at the half. The Americans came out strong in the third quarter and for the first time took the lead at 14-13.

Cockerton pulled Canada even early in the fourth quarter and the two teams traded a pair of goals before regulation time expired.

Handicapping Task Could Get Tougher

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

If it isn't difficult enough to handicap the stars of the Invitational Handicap, the weekly Saturday harness racing feature at Sandown Park the way it is now, it may be even more difficult by next week.

That's because some other good ones are reported coming to the Sidney track.

In the five previous Saturdays that the standardbreds have been running here, the field for the Invitational has been basically the same, with some variations of course.

But the winners have not.

Only Over Burden, a four-year-old black horse, has won twice. Other first-place finishers have been Barnaby Jove, Little Pence and Dusty Speedball.

Saturday was no different as Hazels Yankee suddenly bloomed as the new star of the moment.

A seven-year-old brown gelding, driven by Bob Boyd, Hazels Yankee won the feature by a head with another contender, Trevor John, almost stealing the whole affair before being overtaken at the wire.

Earlier, Hazels Yankee had run down the line to the likes of Over Burden, Little Pence and Mitchs Buch.

But that was prior to June 30. That's when Hazels Yankee should have been noticed. He won a preferred race in 2:05.5 and followed that with a win over Exel B Mac and Dusty Speedball in 2:04.4 on July 3.

The time then should have been the indicator for the future because that was only one-fifth of a second off the track record of 2:04.3 set by Dusty Speedball. To prove the point, Hazels Yankee ran back exactly the same time Saturday, and won. Which is why the times are published in the Racing News. So people should know. In addition, it was Hazels Yankee 14th win of the season.

Next week it will likely be a similary competitive field, with possibly some additions.

Owner-trainer-driver Phil Coleman, who has a few stars of his own, has asked for stall space for six runners and Ken McDonald is also reported bringing over five pacers. It is not known which horses will be coming, but one which could cause more handicapping problems is Rockford Ann, which ran with success against the same kind in Cloverdale.

Otherwise, Hazels Yankee got away at 3-1 odds for the fifth straight race and returned $8.30, $4.90 and $4.20.

Besides a $378.90 exactor in the third, Baroness Love ($16.80) to T.V. Pilot, there was an extraordinary event Saturday. Jack Short, the retired voice of the races and now a B.C. Racing Commissioner, proved he hasn't forgotten to do what he did years ago — drive a sulky. Short won a celebrity race with Mike Woodman of CJVI second, Paul Carson of CHEK-TV third and Ken Dobson of CFAX last.

Racing resumes tonight with an eight-race card at 5:45.

Victory Style Hurts Queens

It was bad enough that league-leading Gorge Hotel of the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League took two games from Dairy Queen Sunday. But the manner in which they won the first is what really hurt the Queens.

The DQs were leading that one 9-2 after five innings and lost 10-9. In the second game Gorge again came from behind to take a 4-2 decision.

In the opener, Dairy Queen pitcher Jim Ruddy was breezing along with that seven-run bulge when disaster struck.

Ruddy, for his part, issued two walks and was replaced by George Fritz. Fritz was just as generous and walked the next two batters, forcing in one run. Then up stepped Gary Brooke to hit a bases-loaded home run. Score: 9-7.

But Gorge wasn't finished. In the seventh, Mike Squire singled and Rick Cook walked. Out went Fritz and in came Bob Mabee.

Mabee promptly walked Rick Shenton, to load the bases, and Gary Law doubled to clear them. Score: 10-9. End of disaster.

In the second game, Gorge broke a 2-1 tie in the sixth for the triumph. Russ Holmes singled, Brian Meadmore was safe on an error, Squire doubled to score Holmes and Meadmore scored on an infield out.

Gorge Hotel	200 005 3—10	8	1

Mike Squire, Rick Cook (5), (8-1) and Russ Holmes; Jim Ruddy, George Fritz (6), Bob Mabee (7), (0-4) and Terry Armstrong. Homeruns: Gorge—Mike Laffin (1), Gary Brooke (2).

Second game:

Dairy Queen	020 000 0—2	4	3
Gorge Hotel	010 102 x—4	5	2

FIREFIGHTERS TRIM TRIANGLE FOR RUTH TITLE

Victoria Firefighters tripped Triangle in two straight games Sunday to capture the Lower Vancouver Island senior Babe Ruth (16-18 years) baseball title and a berth in the British Columbia championship tournament, starting July 22 in Quesnel.

Perry Walz threw a two-hitter to lead Firefighters to a 5-0 shutout over Triangle in the first game of a best-of-three series at Handerson Park.

Firefighters then won the second game, 14-2.

First Purchase Wins Longden

VANCOUVER (CP) — The four-year-old gelding First Purchase led all the way Saturday to win the $16,500-added Johnny Longden 6000 at Exhibition Park.

The 1 1-8 mile Longden, which commemorates the 6,000th victory of the famous jockey at Ex Park in 1965, had a field of six for its 13th running.

Longden, now 71 and a trainer in California, was on hand once again to decorate the winner.

It was the first stakes win of the season for First Purchase, who had earned $40,872 last season as a three-year-old when he had two added-money wins and a place finish in the Longacres Derby.

First Purchase, ridden by Ken Skinner, had the lead by 1 1-2 lengths at the quarter and maintained that margin until leaving the backstretch when he drew away, winning by 4 3-4 lengths.

The winner, second choice on the board, covered the 1 1-8 miles in 1:50 1-5 on a fast track and paid $7.50, $3.80 and $2.70. Favored Pampas Host moved up in the stretch to take second money by a nose over Two Bowls of Rice.

First Purchase, owned by Neil deMacedo of Victoria and trained by Dave Forster, earned $11,235 from the Longden to bring his season earnings to $16,375.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The West defender in today's deal was a novice playing in her first major tournament. She had heard of the rule of leading the highest card in her partner's bid suit, but in this hand she evidently got her adages all mixed up. Her partner had not bid any suit, so she led the highest card in her own best suit. Although her lead was unquestionably incorrect, it was the only one that could have defeated South's game contract. And it did just that.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♡
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

On the face of it, one might get the impression that West's unorthodox lead of the heart gave declarer a present of a trick. But look what happened as a result.

The king was taken by South's ace, after which a low trump was led, West perforce taking the trick with her ace. West returned the jack of hearts, dummy's queen was put up, and East ruffed. Eventually declarer lost another heart trick, plus the ace of clubs to West. So he went down a trick, owing to circumstances behond his control.

Suppose that West, having made up her mind to lead a heart, had chosen to lead the jack. The trick would have been captured by dummy's queen, after which a trump would have been led, West's ace winning. West would now play another heart, which East would trump. But South would still possess the heart ace as a winner, and would thus fulfill his contract.

Putting it another way, when East would ruff the second heart lead, he would be ruffing a trick that south would have to lose anyway.

It should be noted also that if West had elected to make a neutral lead at trick one (let's say, a diamond), declarer would be waltzed in with his contract. He would have driven out West's ace of trumps, picked up East's remaining trump, and cashed the heart ace. Another heart lead toward the board would have made a winner out of dummy's queen of hearts.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Tuesday, July 11
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Serious thought must be given to important move, such as signing a contract, forming partnership — or getting married. There are pressures, responsibilities which become evident. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently. You'll get more money and authority.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Finish what you start. Deal with Libra, Aries persons, check services, availabilities. Dependent says you were right — and concedes a major point. Attend to basic chores, keep diet and health resolutions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good Lunar aspect coincides now with change, speculation, intensified relationship. Leo, Aquarius persons figure in scenario. You make marvelous contacts; you meet creative people. You could fall madly in love. Take a chance on happiness!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Practical matters, questions of survival dominate. Build, store essentials, get files in order, know how to obtain key facts. Aquarius is in picture — so is another Cancer native. Accent on how to deal with older, stubborn authority figures. You can do it!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Plenty of action, movement indicated — message or call could be highlighted. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals figure in scenario. Be adaptable, display versatility — and humor. Horizons expand — you get good news and a windfall.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You get valid information concerning costs, income potential, investment requirements. Individual who speaks bluntly does have your interests at heart). Know it and respond appropriately. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons figure prominently — and so does the number 4.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Luck, timing are with you — strive for pioneering actions, independence, glamor, originality. Leo, Aquarius persons play key roles. Accent on individuality, new starts, changes, personality, general appearance, vitality and love. Make personal appearances.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You gain insights to family problems, questions — you have solid opportunity to improve living conditions. Taurus, Libra persons figure prominently. Go slow, be diplomatic. You're on brink of major achievement. Private meeting or conference will set tone — in your favor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on winning allies, fulfilling desire. Pisces, Virgo persons figure in scenario. Romance, creativity, successful outcome of business transaction are featured.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22—Jan. 19): This could be your powerplay day. You gain authority, prestige and take over reins of your own destiny. Bring priorities into focus. Refuse to be sidetracked by one who is petty, envious and lacks breadth of vision.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good Moon aspect coincides now with journey, publishing, educational project, communication, spiritual revelation. You are capable of completing important project, assignment. Libra persons could figure in scenario.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be specific, direct, get to heart of matters. Emotional responses are accented. Financial concerns of close associate, loved one could dominate. New contact proves worthwhile, could lead to excitement, creative fulfillment.

IF JULY 11 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are sensitive, psychic, loyal to family, have delicate stomach but adore food and yearn for what is not good for you. Leo, Cancer, Aquarius persons play significant roles in your life. October could be one of your most significant months of 1978. You are a deep individual, who abhors sesationalism or superficiality. Quality and originality are your bywords; you are a natural teacher, psychologist and have served as an inspiration to many persons. You are making a grand comeback from recent emotional setback.

"Your hall was always a bit baronial, but today it looks different some way," said Gwen. "What did you do?"

Ken laughed. "You are observant," he replied. "That old bell cord used to hang down the wall and just reach the floor 5 feet from the corner. I've pulled its end tight over to the corner, and that brought it up just one foot from the floor."

How long was the cord?

(Answer tomorrow)

Rewards for Doubles Are 'Bit of an Insult'

LONDON (AP) — Ever-controversial Bob Hewitt won his sixth Wimbledon doubles title Saturday and lost no time in repeating his long-standing complaint that doubles players get a raw deal.

Hewitt partnered Frew McMillan to a 6-1, 6-4, 6-2 victory over young Americans John McEnroe and Peter Fleming for their third triumph together at Wimbledon in 12 years.

McMillan won his second final of the afternoon when he and Betty Stove of Holland teamed up to beat Ray Ruffels of Australia and Billie Jean King of the United States 6-2, 6-2 in mixed doubles.

After the men's doubles, Hewitt, the balding, bearded former-Australian, said, "We deserve better."

Hewitt noted he and McMillan will share $12,600 for their work, while Bjorn Borg took home $33,200 for his 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 men's singles victory over Jimmy Connors.

Addressing 10 reporters, where earlier there had been nearly 100 for Borg, Hewitt said the lack of recognition and small prize money were "a bit of an insult."

Hewitt, who won two doubles titles with his former partner, Fred Stolle, and also won a mixed doubles title with Greer Stevens last year, said that despite being 38 years old he intends to continue playing doubles and singles.

"We will go on as long as we can," he said. "There is no basic reason why we should stop playing.

"I'd like to keep on winning and also to boost doubles."

With the defeat in the mixed doubles final, King, one of the all-time greats of women's tennis, missed collecting a record that would probably have stood for generations.

She and Elizabeth Ryan share the record of 19 Wimbledon titles — singles, women's doubles and mixed doubles — and King, with all the determination at her command, was shooting for a 20th.

But King's track record is a better one than Ryan's. Ryan won all her titles in doubles matches in the years between 1914-1934. King's wins, which include six singles titles, came between 1961 and 1975.

The crowds by the thousands rolled through the Wimbledon gates again this year, despite rain that plagued nearly every one of the tournament's 12 days and forced a midday start—two hours early—for almost half that time. Unofficial attendance figures were put at just over 330,000.

Hoop Fans Eager

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Five thousand basketball fans here have plunked down cash for 5,000 season tickets to watch their team next season, a team with no name, no general manager and no coach.

But there's plenty of hope for the future, and the owner of San Diego's new National Basketball Association club is betting that basketball fans have thirsted for big league basketball ever since their flailing San Diego Rockets left for Houston in 1971.

Owner Iry Levin, who traded his Boston Celtics for Buffalo Braves, then moved the Braves to San Diego, has signed an 18-year lease on the San Diego Sports Arena.

Lakehill Boys Gain West Final

Lakehill Jadresko of the Lower Island Juvenile Soccer Association has qualified for the Western Canada division VI soccer championship.

Jadeskro, a team of 12-year olds, defeated Kamloops 2-1 in the British Columbia final at Centennial Stadium Saturday.

Jadresko had much the best of the action in the first half while Kamloops dominated the late going.

Centre-forward Tod Boothroyd took a pass from leftwinger David Campbell to open the scoring for Jadreskos at the three-minute mark. Eight minutes later Campbell scored and Jadresko appeared to have things well in hand.

But in the second half the tide turned, and in three minutes Chris Hanson scored for Kamloops on a corner kick. From then on it was a case of the Victoria defence working desperately to preserve the win.

SOFTBALL ROUNDUP

Cables, Seaboard Split Doubleheader

Port Angeles Telecable and Seabaord Construction split a hard-fought doubleheader during Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League play Sunday at Central Park.

Denny Sullivan pitched a one-hitter and second-baseman Tom Gagnon made some key plays to give Telecable a 1-0 decision in the opener, but shortstop Brian Grexton came up with some timely moves to help Seaboard grab a 7-5 victory in the second game.

In other games, Ingraham Hotel tumbled Bateson's Karate School 6-1 and Juan de Fuca Builders blanked Sooke Merchants, 5-0.

Sullivan struck out five batters and forced 13 fly-outs while pitching the Port Angeles victory and Gagnon caught four of the flies, nailed two other runners at second and powered in the lone run with a single in the sixth inning. Randy Jackson pitched a three-hitter in a losing cause.

Grexton helped the Seaboard win by driving in three runs in the second inning with a triple and producing another run with a sacrifice in the fourth.

For Ingraham, Lorne Bowden picked up the victory as he struck out nine batters and allowed only three hits. Clubmate Bob Reid helped out at the plate with a single and a double in three trips, scoring twice and driving in two runs. John Coccioloni added a homer.

Builders turned five singles into all five of their runs in the fifth inning and Len Carolan threw a five-hitter for the win.

In a senior "C" women's tournament at Hyacinth Park, Princeton Hotel of Vancouver tripped Hospitality Inn of Port Alberni 7-4 to win "A" section honors while Esquimalt Combos topped MacDonald's Furniture 11-5 to win the "B" section for teams with one earlier loss.

In Sidney Men's Association play, two doubleheaders were split at Sanscha Park.

Sidney Travelodge tripped Hermsen Construction 12-6 in the opener and then lost a 7-6 decision in eight innings during the second contest.

Saanich Breakers rallied with six runs in the sixth inning to post a 7-4 win over Sidney Hotel in their opener but bowed 6-2 in the second tussle.

OAK BAY TAKES BASEBALL TITLE

Shawn Lawless helped out two ways Saturday as he paced Oak Bay to a 14-8 victory over Layritz in the final of the single-loss elimination Greater Victoria Little League baseball championship tournament at Ambassador Park.

Lawless struck out eight batters to earn the pitching decision and aided his own cause at the plate by hitting a home run.

Dane Collects Prairie Crown

CALGARY (CP) — Lars Elvstrom of Denmark showed Sunday he has fully recovered from a six-month bout with pneumonia, complicated by a broken rib, by winning the men's singles final in the $15,000 Praire Open tennis tournament.

Playing in only his second tournament since returning to competition, fifth-seeded Elvestrom defeated fourth-seed Emilio Montano of Mexico 6-2, 4-6, 6-2.

Montano and doubles partner Steve Rogul of Toronto lost to Brad Coleman of Garland, Tex., and Glen Holroyd of Phoenix, Ariz., 6-3 3-6 7-6 in the final. The third set went to a 7-2 tiebreaker.

Top-seeded Zenda Liess, Daytona Beach, Fla. supported her billing with a 7-6 6-1 victory over fourth-seeded Leslie Allen of New York City in the women's singles.

The Prairie Open was the second tournament on the $100,000 six-city American Express Canadian Challengers Circuit.

The Ontario Open, the third stop, begins Tuesday at Toronto's Boulevard Club.

Multiple Hostages Aid Bloody Escape

MONTREAL (CP) — Provincial police were continuing their search today for Yvon St. Louis, an escaped prisoner who slipped from their grasp during a seven-hour weekend chase that involved seven hostages and left two policemen and a police dog wounded.

A police spokesman said there had been no new developments in the search, but authorities believe that if the 26-year-old St. Louis has left the city, he may have travelled north to take refuge in the Laurentian Mountains.

The two policemen wounded in the escape have been released from hospital and the dog was reported in satisfactory condition.

The driver of a car commandeered by St. Louis in north-end Montreal told police the escapee had asked for quarters, fueling speculation he was headed for the Laurentian Autoroute, a toll road and the main route north.

The chase began shortly before noon Saturday when St. Louis escaped from a provincial detention centre in Sorel, Que., 70 kilometres northeast of the city, police said. He was due to be arraigned today on charges stemming from an armed robbery.

St. Louis was also being held on charges of sexual assault, illegal possession of weapons, car theft and extortion. He was arrested in Montreal last month.

After escaping from prison armed with a .45-calibre pistol, he commandeered a car and seized the two occupants as hostages. He abandoned both car and hostages after reaching a wooded area near Contrecoeur, about halfway between Sorel and Montreal.

Provincial police officer Gilles Nadeau and his tracking dog Tex were shot after they spotted the prisoner in the wooded area, police said.

Tex spotted the escapee first and was shot as he approached. Then Nadeau went down, wounded in the arm and leg.

As Nadeau lay helpless nearby, St. Louis demanded that two policemen and a journalist join him as hostages in a marked provincial police car "to get out of the woods without more shooting."

Michel Tremblay, a photographer for the weekly tabloid Dimanche-Matin, said he agreed to go along because "I wanted to do something" to help.

The car headed for Montreal with St. Louis in the back seat covering Tremblay, Sgt. Gilles Frigon and Lieut. Gilles Belley.

"About twenty minutes after we left I saw Belley quietly take the gun from the holster and put it in his pocket.

"St Louis wanted us to head for Montreal so he could visit his mother," Tremblay said. "Through the whole trip he said he just wanted to visit her and then kill himself."

He told his hostages, however: "There is no danger to you. Just do what I want."

"At first there was some tension in the car so we joked a little bit," Tremblay related. "We had to change the atmosphere."

During the ride, Belley tried to dissuade the escapee from killing himself, and St. Louis "said that he shot Nadeau accidently—that he didn't want to hurt him."

When the car pulled up outside the home of St. Louis's mother in Montreal, the escapee ordered Belley to bring her out of the house, Tremblay said.

He then told Frigon to drive around the block so as not to arouse the suspicion of passers-by, but agreed to stop at a gas station when Frigon said the car needed gas.

When the sergeant got out of the car and made off, "I ran too," Tremblay said. "Frigon went south and I went north. St. Louis could have shot me but he didn't."

With no hostages left, the escapee jumped into the front seat and drove away with the lights flashing and the siren screaming, the photographer said.

Police said the car was involved in an accident and the escapee commandeered a second car, taking the driver hostage. However, he was soon stopped by a Montreal motorcycle policeman after running a red light.

LOVE FLEES TORONTO. . .

TORONTO — There will be, alas, less love in Toronto.

Irving Layton, Canada's foremost erotic poet, is moving back to Montreal after nine years to warm his hands over the creative fires of French-English culture.

"This is no city for mystics and visionaries," he said. "What people worship here is success. In Montreal, I see warmth in people's faces, acceptance of others for what they are, not what their bank balances register."

Having pronounced Toronto spiritually dead, he will return to his Montreal roots as head of Concordia University's creative writing workshop, commuting weekly to be Ottawa University's poet in residence.

"Toronto made my career. In one week I got more support from radio, TV, newspapers than I did in a year in Montreal," he grudgingly concedes, however.

Forced to Murder, Manson Tells Press

VACAVILLE, Calif. — Charles Manson says he went to prison "for cutting people, for shooting people," but in a prison interview says he didn't want to kill.

In a copyright story Sunday in the Vacaville Reporter, Manson said he murdered, "not because I wanted to, but because I was forced to."

"That's part of the game of being an outlaw and I've always been an outlaw," said the 44-year-old Manson, serving a life term for masterminding the 1969 murders of actress Sharon Tate and four persons at her home and Leno and Rosemarie La Bianca at their home.

The leader of the so-called "Manson family" normally turns down requests for interviews, prison officials said, but agreed to meet with reporter Chris Weinstein because of a recommendation from another prisoner.

As for the "family," many also behind bars for crimes ranging from the Tate-La Bianca killings to the attempted murder of former president Gerald Ford, Manson said: "This thing just happened. This person had no place to stay and this person was lost and had no place to stay, and I didn't have no place to stay.

"They were nobody and I was nobody. They were out in the streets kicked out of their houses and I was kicked out of my house. (It) just happened, and another thing happened."

Manson would not elaborate on what specifically happened, saying he's saving that information for a new trial he hopes to get.

Manson is a high-security prisoner at Vacaville Medical Facility, a California prison about 80 kilometres east of San Francisco. Under state law, he becomes eligible for parole consideration later this year.

BUTCHER TO BAKER, NOW NATURALLY. . .

DES MOINES — Art Alber has been a butcher and a baker and now plans to become a candlestick maker.

"I figure I was a butcher for more than 30 years and now I have been a baker for more than 10 years — where else could I logically go?" he asked. "Seriously, I plan to go into decorator candles when I do retire. I figure there's a market there like anyplace else."

Alber, who now owns the only wholesale pie shop in town, said he never really intended to become a pieman. He said he was forced into the job.

"I had bought the shop for my son and then we discovered that he was allergic to flour and couldn't run it, so I had to get into it to protect my investment," he said. "And once I got in, I got hooked," he said.

CBC Denies ACTRA Claim

TORONTO — The CBC says it auditioned 17 Canadian actresses and seriously considered 15 other Canadians before hiring an American actress for a feature role in its scheduled production of The Street.

In a letter to Bud Cullen, federal employment and immigration minister, the CBC said it also approached four Canadian actresses for the part but they were unavailable for the shooting schedule.

Last week, the Toronto branch of the Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists accused the CBC of showing contempt for Canadian talent by hiring American actress Janet Ward for the part without adequately auditioning Canadian actresses.

The association said that about six Canadian actresses and two American performers had auditioned for the part of a middle-aged Jewish woman in the production, based on a novella by Mordecai Richler.

It also condemned the immigration department for issuing a work permit to Ms. Ward.

The CBC letter, however, said ACTRA issued a nonmember work permit to Ms. Ward on June 30 for a $75 fee.

The CBC said the work of four Canadian actresses was screened for the role.

In addition, three Canadian actresses scheduled to audition for the part did not show and three of the Canadian actresses who did audition for the part were hired for other roles in the film which is to be shot in Montreal.

Twelve performers were auditioned in New York for the role.

Copies of the letter also were sent to Secretary of State John Roberts and the Toronto branch of ACTRA.

No Wedding, Says Christina

MOSCOW — With a firm "No, no, no," Christina Onassis, daughter of the late Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis, has denied reports that she will marry Russian bureaucrat Nikolai Kaosov in Moscow.

Same wallpaper pattern links kitchen, family room

Separate But Together

By PAULINE GRAVES

Family room and kitchen combinations have become as American as mom's apple pie. But they varied as needs and tastes dictate. When first they hit the building scene, the family room was an extension of the kitchen, and a bar height counter created a semi separation, until this approach became a stereotype. All sorts of adaptations evolved, but the two rooms together, with a mild separation, have proved to be the most practical.

Shown here is a good idea that combines several features. A counter divides the two areas, kitchen and family room, but what a divider. Supported by a brick base, the tile topped counter has a wide overhang, 15-inches, at the end, and along the family room side. The height is normal table height, right for standard dining room chairs. Those chosen are comfortable bent wood chairs, with arms, and they augment seating in the family room.

The kitchen's work counter continues from two sides of the kitchen onto the snack counter, which is two inches lower, and this combination of the two levels has interest in itself. In the higher level of the snack area is the cook top. No hood above the range is needed to draw away smoke and odors because this model has a built-in fan that draws them down and out of the room. The elimination of the hood maintains the open look between the two rooms and they both benefit from it, seeming spacious and light.

Tips for Safe Biking

A 13-year-old boy whirled around a corner on his bike and was swept up and killed by a street-cleaning machine. A cycling commuter died as a result of head injuries after crashing into a truck door that opened just as his bike approached. A pedestrian was killed when she was struck by a cyclist riding on a sidewalk; the rider survived his injuries.

A man suffered serious brain and other injuries when his bike struck a stick obscured by leaves and he plunged over the handlebars into a telephone pole. And a 15-year-old girl required extensive surgery to repair facial injuries suffered when her shoulder bag got caught between the front spokes and fork of her 10-speed bike and she was catapulted over the handlebars.

Studies have shown that the vast majority of bike accidents are preventable, that most are due to the cyclist's carelessness — the failure to obey traffic laws, to select a suitable bike and maintain it in good working condition, to observe sensible riding precautions that take none of the joy out of cycling but make the popular activity far safer.

While every rider learns how to balance on two wheels, very few school themselves on how to cycle safely once the balancing act is mastered. There is no required "driver's licence" for cyclists. And while cyclists are supposed to observe traffic rules, the law is rarely enforced and many cyclists act as if they were a law unto themselves. They rarely stop at red lights or stop signs, ride the wrong way down one-way streets, ride on the wrong side of two-way streets, ride on sidewalks, tear out of driveways, and weave in and out of traffic.

Since designated bicycle paths are still uncommon, most two-wheeled excursions occur on roadways frequented by motor vehicles. In a collision between a two-ton auto and a 35-pound bicycle, the cyclist has hardly a fighting chance. A California study showed that in 70 percent of bicycle-car accidents, the cyclist had disregarded traffic laws.

Approximately half of serious bicycle accidents involve youngsters between the ages of five and 14. In nine out of 10 cases, the accident is the cyclist's fault — most commonly, as one detailed study showed, emerging precipitously from a minor roadway such as an alley, driveway, parking lot or gas station, and ignoring stop or yield signs. One-quarter of serious cycling accidents happen to adults, with a third of the accidents the cyclist's fault.

In addition to learning and obeying basic traffic laws, here are other tips of safe riding:

— Before taking a new bike into traffic, practice riding it in a parking lot or other protected area until you're thoroughly familiar with the equipment and comfortable riding. This is especially important when switching from a standard or three-speed bike to a 10-speed one.

— Buy a bike that fits. You should be able to touch the ground with your feet while sitting on the seat. Don't buy a bike for a child to "grow into." Avoid hand brakes and multiple gears for young children. Parents should supervise their child's bike selection and not let the child "customize" the bike in ways that compromise its safety features.

— Teach children that bikes are vehicles, not toys. They should be cautioned against doing stunts (many children have been seriously hurt trying to imitate Evel Knievel on homemade ramps). Except on tandem bikes, only one child should ride at a time. The popular "banana" seats encourage unsafe double riding. If your child has one, he should agree to take no passengers.

— If you want to carry a young child while you ride, the child should be securely strapped into a carrier seat that has side panels to prevent his feet from getting stuck in the wheel or other working parts. No child should ever be carried on the handlebars, crossbar, fender or in a basket. Before attempting to ride with a child, be sure you are an experienced rider secure on your equipment.

— Children under 12 are best restricted to daytime riding, preferably with a high flag on the bike. Older children who ride at night should have reflectors, lights front and back and wear light-colored clothing. Parents should be sure children have mastered both their bikes and traffic rules before allowing them to ride on roadways.

— Pay careful attention to the surface you're riding on. Beware of sewer grates, potholes, large cracks, rocks, sticks, loose gravel and sand. It's best to avoid riding in wet weather, when skidding is more likely and brakes may not hold well.

— Ride with both hands on the handlebars. If you expect to be carrying objects (packages, purse, books, sports equipment), equip your bike with a basket or pannier bag or both.

DEAR MIKE: Each morning when I back my 1977 Monte Carlo out of the garage, it makes a low growling noise in reverse. This lasts only about 20 seconds and then goes away. It rarely shows up again until the next morning. The dealer has kept the car overnight and can't find anything wrong. Should I be concerned? — GROWLER

DEAR GROWLER: No. It's not uncommon for cars to have wake-up noises that go away once they warm up. I don't believe your growl is from your transmission. It might be a hardened fanbelt, a pulley, power steering pump, or something along that line.

DEAR MIKE: My 1973 Dodge Colt seems to cut out and miss beats at between 20 and 40 mph. If I accelerate, the engine's jerking action goes away. Two dealers and an independent shop have checked the car. I've gotten a new carburetor, fuel pump, points, plugs, and wiring. The engine seems to be getting worse, not better. Hope you can help. — MYSTIFIED

DEAR MYST: It's almost normal for 1972-73 cars to be jetted so lean that the carburetor causes surge even when it's perfectly adjusted. Lean carburetion was specified by the factory to meet smog requirements. I think you'll have to learn to live with it.

DEAR MIKE: Did Mercedes-Benz ever mass produce a car with a 4-speed column shift? That is, did they make a transmission with three forward speeds plus overdrive, just like a 4-speed stick shift? — EAGER TO KNOW

DEAR EAGER: Mercedes did make a 4-speed column shift in the mid-1950s. Whether fourth gear was an overdrive I don't know.

DEAR MIKE: We have a 1966 Impala 283. This car has only 39,000 miles on it. It runs great except for a slight clicking noise in the engine. We've put in two quarts of an additive that's recommended for freeing up stuck hydraulic valve lifters. The click, though, is still there. Any tips? — CLICKY

DEAR CLICKY: First, additives rarely work on stuck lifters. Second, it might not be a lifter at all. It could be a loose rocker nut or something that rotates. With as few miles as your car shows, it has to have been driven on mostly short trips, and those often don't let the engine warm up completely. Which means that acid, sludge, and carbon don't get burnt off. So it's important that you change oil much more often than recommended. Clean oil is essential to free lifter operation.

BIONIC LEGS HER DREAM

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Paula Saunders says she dreams that bionic legs will be perfected in her lifetime.

Seven years ago, Mrs. Saunders, 24, was in a two-truck collision. Trapped in the cab when it burst into flames, she received third-degree burns to 75 per cent of her body and her legs had to be amputated below the knee.

She said she is grateful her husband, Paul, was not injured seriously in the accident and that their infant son, Todd, was not with them.

Mrs. Saunders now is the mother of two sons. Craig is three.

She was fitted with artificial limbs several months after the accident but she said she perfers her wheelchair.

Mrs. Saunders works as a volunteer at the Klemmer Farm House Co-operative Nursery in Waterloo, where, she said, she is just one of the mothers helping with crafts and games.

She says children accept the fact that she has no legs in a matter-of-fact way and that to her own family she is not a cripple.

"After the initial shock, I decided life is for living, not for being sorry for myself. I had only lost my legs—but it wasn't easy adjusting."

She now drives a hand-operated car, she dances on her artificial limbs and she swims.

Her husband, Paul, 28, and a third-year student at the University of Waterloo, has made adjustments around the house so she can move easily in her wheelchair. He raised the level of the family room, put a ramp in the back yard and and restyled the bathroom.

Mrs. Saunders said she always is busy. She is past president of Delta Rho chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority and was the chapter's Girl of the Year in 1976.

"They're the greatest," she said. "They see me, not the handicap."

ADDICTION UNIT CLOSES

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The Addiction Research Foundation is closing its 16-bed unit at Kingston Psychiatric Hospital and going into the education business.

Director Dr. George Laverty says the foundation has spent many years trying to find a treatment for alcoholism that really works, the way antibiotics work on infections.

However, no answer other than abstinence has been found.

He said he is skeptical a perfect cure will ever be found and the foundation will attempt to educate the public instead of treat the casualties of alcohol.

Adrian's broad-shouldered look

Adrian Dresses Reached Peak During War

Fashion Designer in Smithsonian

Greta Garbo languished in an Adrian dress in "Grand Hotel." Joan Crawford pined in one. Norma Shearer, Carole Lombard and tiny Janet Gaynor, Adrian's wife, romped across the screen in his dresses and gowns during the 1930s and 1940s, inspiring hundreds of American women to leave darkened movie houses and head for their sewing machines.

Seventh Avenue wasn't far behind, churning out simulations of Adrians: exotic fantasy creations rampant with animal motifs or patched with sequined or embroidered insets.

But it was during the Second World War, under government materials restrictions that Adrian hit his creative stride. With prohibitions against lapels, collars and buckles and limits on material and buttons, Adrian stitched up a square-shouldered, padded silhouette that still has impact on the fashion scene.

It is for this creative originality that Adrian is the subject of the first focus on an American designer by the costume division of the Smithsonian Museum of History and Technology in Washington.

Born Adrian Adolph Greenberg in 1903 in Naugatuck, Conn., Adrian began his career as a Broadway designer who created costumes for the musical extravaganzas of Irving Berlin and Florenz Zeigfeld. By the late 1920's, he was in Hollywood, eventually becoming chief fashion designer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

A stickler for detail, elegance and fine handwork, he was the first to popularize sequined and embroidered designs for evening dress. His signature meant drama and romanticism.

Adrian broke with the studio in 1942, when it asked him to design sweet girl-next-door clothing for Greta Garbo in an attempt to broaden her appeal for American audiences.

His departure was a propitious move. Parision couture was closed to the world by the German occupation and Adrian appeared on the commercial scene as "an exciting new force," according to Claudia Kidwell, the museum's costume division curator. Adrian died in 1954, just as he was beginning to design costumes for the Broadway production of "Camelot."

"His genius is his work during the wartime," Mrs. Kidwell said. "No matter what you could afford to pay, you still couldn't use any more material than was allowed."

"He sculpted and tucked and inset so that each of his designs was an individual creation. And even then, he designed at the most expensive level. His suits cost $140. They were special, which is why so many women bought them to get married in. They were practical yet beautiful."

A year ago, the museum had only two Adrians, Mrs. Kidwell explained. A query late last spring was sent out and was picked up by the wire services. Adrian's designs, it was learned, had been collected for almost a decade by the students of Cheltenham High School in Wyncote, Pa., under a program by Joseph Simms, a history teacher there. Mrs. Kidwell was surprised to find that many others were also available.

"We heard from a tremendous number of people. We're still hearing from some," she said. "It was mostly ready-made things, not his couture, and we had to turn down many offers because of the space," she said, explaining that the museum had been looking for Adrian suits that were good examples of his work, with documentation on where the outfit was bought, the occasion for which it was worn and with what accessories.

Not all stacked heels on new boots and shoes are real stacked heels made of layers of leather. Less-expensive look-alikes can be molded plastic heels covered with strips of leather or inked to look stacked. Don't wear the plastic heels down into the plastic. The only way a shoe repairman can even out the worn areas is by sawing off the plastic on both heels, that's an expensive shoe repair job.

Valuable but No Cure-All, Cortisone 30 Years Old

NEW YORK (AP) — It was 30 years ago that Dr. Philip Hench tried a new drug on patients badly crippled with rheumatoid arthritis in the Mayo Clinic. The substance was cortisone.

Today, tennis players with bursitis, arthritics and asthma patients are familiar with the artificial hormone that puts out painful fires in the body. Cortisone, one of the broader group of corticosteroids, is almost as well known as penicillin.

The steroids, potent medication, can attack a wide variety of diseases, but they also can produce potent, disagreeable side effects.

"This is an excellent example of a drug you think is going to be a panacea," says Dr. Carol Proudfit, senior scneitist in the American Medical Association's department of drugs. "There is a tremendously wide range of usefulness and problems associated with them. Corticosteroids serve as an example of the things you learn about drugs only with use."

Cortisone had its clinical beginnings in 1948, when Hench was treating rheumatoid arthritis patients at the Mayo Clinic. The early results were dramatic.

In September of that year, as Donald Robinson recalls in The Miracle Finders, an account of key developments in modern medicine, Hench injected cortisone into a 29-year-old woman who had been bed-ridden for four years with crippling rheumatoid arthritis.

Two days later, on Sept. 23, "for the first time in several weeks, she could roll over in bed easily. On Sept. 24, she was able to get out of bed and exercise. She could raise her arms over her head. By Oct. 1, her pain and stiffness were almost completely gone.

"Other patients who were in grisly shape with rheumatoid arthritis were given Compound E (cortisone). They all responded excellently."

But cortisone did not cure arthritis or any other disease. It just controlled the symptoms. And a range of side effects began to appear with prolonged use. And sometimes the early improvement was not maintained.

Doctors found they had been giving too much and later lowered the dosages of cortisone and a related hormone, ACTH, to achieve a more moderate improvement.

Most of the cortisone-like drugs now in use are synthetic agents that have replaced cortisone and have been tailored in the laboratory for more specific uses.

These synthetic analogs as they are called are effective because of their potent anti-inflammatory effects.

Unlike antibiotics, which kill disease-causing bacteria in the body, the steroids provide the body tissue with a resistance, a protective mantle, against the inflammation. But at the same time, they let bacteria or viruses—if they are causing the inflammation—multiply. In such cases, steroids mask the symptom but allow the progress of the infectious agent, and steroids are usually avoided in these circumstances.

Fashion Pacesetter Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — "You can never be too thin or too rich," she once said.

And she was indeed tall and willowy and wealthy. Last week, Barbara Cushing "Babe" Paley died of cancer at the age of 63.

While she was alive, Mrs. Paley kept her name on best-dressed lists and society pages here and abroad.

When U.S. designers took over the coveted best-dressed list from Paris couturiers in 1940, the name Barbara Cushing Mortimer was prominent. She worked as an editor at Vogue magazine before her marriage to William S. Paley, chairman of CBS, Inc., in 1947.

By 1959, she was elected to fashion's Hall of Fame as a best-dressed pacesetter "above annual comparison." And in 1975, her name was given a special citation — "super dresser of our time."

She was an honorary life trustee of the North Shore University Hospital of Manhasset, N.Y., trustee of the Museum of Broadcasting, the William S. Paley Foundation and the Greenpark Foundations.

Mrs. Paley, who lived with her husband on a estate in suburban Manhasset, was born in Brookline, Mass. She was the youngest of three daughters born to the late Dr. Harvey W. Cushing, a noted neurosurgeon.

From her marriage to Stanley G. Mortimer, Jr., she had a son, Stanley G. Mortimer III, and a daughter, Amanda Mortimer Burden. She had two children with Paley—William Cushing Paley and Kate Paley.

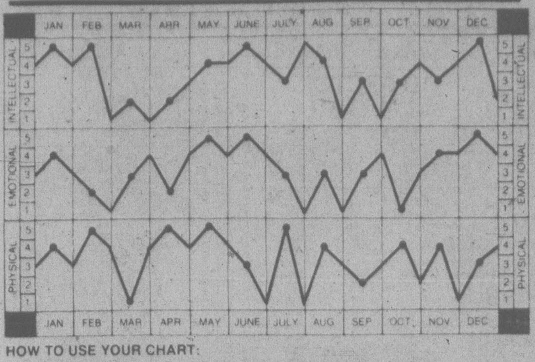
Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- This is not the time to resolve personal misunderstandings. Your less than even temperament may make matters worse.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- You are very sensitive of criticism. Recognize the spirit in which it is given and you'll benefit.

11-15 Positive Cycle- You'll be seeing blue skies even if it is raining. Don't bother to analyze — just enjoy!

Intellectually high? It doesn't guarantee a smooth business day. While business and financial matters are clear to you, others may find them confusing — and you may find that aggravating. Be patient with those who are not thinking as clear as you are. The day may come when the shoe is on the other foot.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old woman keeping company with a 32-year-old man whom I've known for almost a year. (I'll call him Roland.) We are planning to marry as soon as he locates in a nearby city. (He's a professional person with a promising career.)

I have never been promiscuous, but I did succumb at age 16, and fortunately escaped becoming pregnant.

I became engaged at 20 and had a brief sexual relationship, but we broke up when I discovered that my fiance was a compulsive gambler.

My problem: Roland has never indicated by word or action that he would like to sleep with me. I would willingly agree, but I can't bring myself to lead the way. I am really concerned over his lack of interest in sex.

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: Have a frank talk with Roland. Ask him if he's indifferent about sex in general, or just with you. Also find out if he has refrained from mentioning the subject because he's saving himself until after the wedding — or, if, perchance, there's another reason.

DEAR ABBY: I am 12 years old, and my scout troop recently made a visit to a nursing home to cheer up the old folks there. We made some colorful paper flowers beforehand, and we sang some songs to entertain the old people.

Abby, you wouldn't believe how hungry those old folks were for company. The first lady I handed a flower to, gave it back to me, saying she didn't have any money to buy it. Then I told her it was free, and her face lit up and she took such a long time trying to decide which color to take. I got the feeling that she was trying to detain me just to have somebody to talk to for a while longer.

I can't tell you how much our visit was appreciated. When we drove off, we could see the folks looking through the windows and holding on to their paper flowers.

Please put something in your column to get people to visit their local nursing homes, whether they have somebody there or not. They are all somebody's grandmothers and grandfathers and they are human, too. — GIRL SCOUT

DEAR SCOUT: Bless you for writing. And those of you out there who are interested in visiting nursing homes to cheer up the residents should telephone first and make arrangements with the staff.

If you are more than ten pounds overweight, you should see your doctor to determine how much you should lose and how fast you should lose it.

The 10-page folder How To Eat Well And Grow Slim tells you how to lose weight safely. It urges you never to skip a meal and not to aim at losing more than one or two pounds a week.

The folder lists several food groups and the quantity per serving. For instance, in the protein rich foods group, one serving represents three ounces of hard cheese, or three medium eggs, or three ounces of cooked lean meat.

In the bread, cereal and pasta group, ⅓ cup of flaked or puffed cereal represents one serving, so do three small soda crackers, half an English muffin, half a large hamburger or hot dog roll.

The vegetable group lists many vegetables which may be eaten freely. Others are limited. For instance ¼ cup of baked beans is one serving, so is one small baked potato, one cup beets or one cup green peas.

Finally, the folder explains how many servings of each group are allowed for a 1,200-1,800 calories-a-day diet plan.

To obtain the above-mentioned folder write to: Bakery Council of Canada, Box 61, Toronto-Dominion Centre, Toronto, Ont. M5K 1G5.

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Many adolescents live in a state of confusion and conflict. Some, in desperation, cry out for help. Others are not so fortunate and continue to bear a burden that devitalizes their energy and affects their happiness and scholastic achievement.

This letter, written by Miss D.C., represents the conflicts of post-adolescence and early adulthood. Parents who read it may be given new insight into the unexpressed fears and problems that besiege young people. Miss D.C. writes:

"Every morning I cry a little because I don't want to face another day with my struggle. I used to be an excellent tennis player. Now, I don't have the energy to be an excellent tennis player. Now, I don't have the energy to be alert and my body feels heavy and worn out. I find it hard to listen and can't concentrate on study. I am 19 years old and a sophomore at college.

"I began to drink and smoke marijuana. That didn't help me. I hate being a different person and no longer want to live. My future seems dim and hard. Night after night, I can't sleep. My parents believe I have "mono" and anemia, as it runs in my family. They think it's all due to the stress at school. But I believe I'm going through a deep depression.

"As I write, I feel a little better and I'm glad to be alive." — Miss D.C.

Dear Miss C.:

The key line in your letter is the last one. The fact that you are writing to me, a total stranger, is very significant. You are able to express the painful thoughts you have and, at the same time, maintain your anonymity.

The simple process of expressing deep-seated, conflicting problems tends to clarify them and bring all aspects into proper perspective. That is exactly what you're doing. You now have proof that liberating one's thoughts is the first giant step towards one's eventual recovery from depression.

Well-meaning parents sometimes evade the reality that complex psychological behavior is not always due to inadequate rest, poor diet, too much activity or "mono" and anemia. Sometimes it is difficult for them to understand why a 19-year-old, attractive, privileged sophomore at college, with a "wonderful life ahead of her," should be so emotionally distressed and depressed. Consequently, these parents may resist facing the idea that emotional support from a professional outside source is necessary. On the other hand, parents who are enlightened to the benefits of psychological help do encourage their children to seek such counseling and therapy.

At your university there is an excellent psychological department. Just as you are able to express your feelings to me, you must do so to the counselors who will be assigned to you. You will find that, with their guidance, you will be given a newer insight into the reasons for your despair. When the veil is lifted, renewed confidence and happiness will replace your depression.

Different Kinds of Thrills

The sunny warm days of summer bring an excellent opportunity for assessing the home garden in terms of satisfying experiences.

For some the big thrill comes from watching the rapid development of vegetables to the perfect small size at which they reach the ultimate in flavor. A creamy white cauliflower for example, is delicate in texture and flavor, not to be experienced in those from store displays.

Another home gardener finds pleasure in tree shaded corners where cool blue flowers offset the effect of heat in more sunny areas where hot orange blooms are rampant. Climbers with or without flowers offer overhead and side shade at the same time permitting the free circulation of air in all directions.

Apart from creating shaded areas for relaxation and outdoor summer living in general, climbing plants give a third dimension to gardening. Unlike trees and shrubs which occupy increasingly wide areas of space, climbers are easily maintained in a more or less flat plane with only the root area to be granted ground space.

There is no doubt that a garden with many green shades and tones is more restful than one where summer flowering plants are abundant. This is not to say that a group of one type is out of place against a background of green, nor that all color should be massed only for spring or fall seasons.

Summer color is delightful when viewed from a shaded area, either an approach walk or a relaxation sitting area, looking toward a distant point in the garden. To be most effective a large grouping of one color leaves the viewer with no doubt of identity instead of having the mind subconsciously occupied with wondering that kind of plants make up the group.

Nor is there much chance of the color mass failing in a week, for most plants have flower buds produced and maturing over a long period.

Restfulness is needed in home gardens for summer pleasure. Excitement and constructive work is fine in spring and fall. And in spring excitement is with new bulbs bursting into flower each day, and again in the fall, as plants hurry into bloom after summer's sun has brought them to maturity.

And in winter we need the quieter excitement of unexpected flowers or new growth emerging in warm corners sheltered from the blasts of winter wich visit even this favored spot in Canada.

Summer experiences in the home garden can be exciting to all ages of growing youngsters especially if not previously familiar with watching development of living things. Food plants seldom fail to cause interest if the interest is shared with others.

Tomato and squash plants put into the garden as small green plants have developed in a few weeks with quantities of fruits still not quite ready to eat but rapidly nearing that stage. Some children grow up not knowing how even one item of their daily food is produced.

Cartons and printed packages are the "food" symbol to many people today. Don't let this happen in your family.

These sunny days of summer can still produce satisfying exprience in growing food if a start is made now, today, in preparing a small vegetable plot. Get the seeds in this week, and make this a truly satisfying summer for the whole family.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

THE STORY OF

THE HOT DOG VENDOR

There was once a man who lived by the side of the road and sold hot dogs.

He sold very good hot dogs.

He put up signs along the highway and advertised in the newspaper telling how good they were.

He stood on the side of the road and cried:

"Buy a hot dog, Mister?"

And people bought.

He increased his meat and bun orders.

He bought a bigger stove to take care of his trade.

He finally got his son home from college to help him out.

But then something happened.

His son said, "Father, haven't you been listening to the news and reading the papers?

There's a big recession.

The domestic situation is worse."

Whereupon the father thought

"Well, my son's been to college, he listens to the radio and watches TV and he reads and he ought to know."

So the father cut down on his meat and bun orders, took down his signs and cancelled his newspaper ads.

And his hot dog sales fell overnight.

"You're right, son" the father said to the boy.

Former Iraqi PM Slain In London

LONDON (UPI) — Former Iraqi Prime Minister Abdul Razzak Nayef died today from head wounds inflicted by an Arab gunman and police said they were questioning the gunman and a second suspect.

Nayef, 44, was shot in the back of the head at close range as he was entering a taxi in front of the Intercontinental Hotel near Hyde Park corner late Sunday morning. He died early today at Westminster Hospital.

Police said they took the second suspect into custody at Heathrow International Airport, but offered no details. A hotel doorman in full livery dodged gunfire to capture the man he saw shoot Nayef.

A hotel doorman and a chauffeur captured the gunman as he tried to climb into a taxi. The man was taken to a nearby police station. His identity was not released by police.

Witnesses said Naif, 44, had started to enter a taxi outside the Intercontinental Hotel when a man loitering in the area came up behind him and fired several shots, hitting him in the back of the head.

CINEMA BLAZE 'NIGHTMARE

MANILA (UPI) — Survivors and witnesses today recounted tales of horror and how human vultures preyed on helpless victims of a fire that engulfed a downtown Manila movie theatre.

At least 16 persons died and 75 others were injured in the Sunday fire which swept the Manila Cinema housed in a five-story building in the centre of the city's "university belt."

Police said most of the victims were killed or hurt in a stampede for exits. Four bodies were found in the toilet.

"It was a nightmare," said Marivi Reyes, a 20-year-old university student. She said smoke suddenly appeared on the movie screen and before they knew it, a fire was raging inside the theater.

"The balcony steps going down were filled with unconscious people. There was no other way so we passed through broken bodies in order to get out," she said.

Priscilla de Los Reyes said she got past the main door with some bruises and almost suffocated from smoke. She said a couple rushed at her and she thought they were trying to help her. They grabbed her handbag.

Witnesses said some supposed volunteers rescuers stripped the victims, particularly those who were unconscious, of watches, wallets and other valuables, making it difficult for them to be identified.

It was the worst fire in terms of casualties in Manila since last November's blaze which swept through a tourist notel, killing 47 persons.

Rough Waters For 'Dry India'

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Indian Prime Minister Morarji Desai's bid to turn India dry under a phased process of prohibition is meeting with growing opposition.

Three months after legislation was introduced on April 1, some states have taken no action to implement the ban and there has been a growing chorus of opposition by people inside and outside the ruling Janata Party.

The ascetic Desai, 82, is an indefatigable advocate of prohibition and has said he would rather see his government fall than withdraw his legislation.

But his plan to impose total prohibition within four years suffered a setback May 25 when the Allahabad High Court in the northern state of Uttar Pradesh quashed a government order banning drinking in seven districts in the state.

The court upheld a case presented by more than 2,000 petitioners, mostly bar owners, that the ban went against the constitution which guaranteed them personal liberty to eat and drink what they like.

Among the petitioners were traders of toddy, or palm wine, which they said is sometimes used as a medicine.

The anti-prohibitionist cause now has been joined by a leading Janata Party legislator, Piloo Mody, who wrote a letter to Desai saying:

"As for drinking, everyone knows that I am not fond of it and can do without it almost indefinitely, but don't think that I can live without the right to drink."

Mody said social reforms should be carried out by persuasion, not legislation.

Janata members also contended that prohibition was not part of the party platform in the 1977 general election and had been introduced without giving party members full opportunity for discussing the issue.

Desai was unimpressed. In his published reply he said: "It is common experience that in the interest of national policy and welfare of the community, individual sacrifices have to be made and I would suggest that you view the matter in the light of these considerations."

Forgeries Seized

PARIS (AFP) — French police last year seized about 43 million francs $15 million U.S. worth of forged banknotes, travellers cheques, postal orders, savings certificates and other bills of credit.

Restraint The Key, Says Wolfe

VANCOUVER (CP) — Evan Wolfe, British Columbia minister of finance, said Sunday he is optimistic his control of the province's finances will lead to continued economic growth.

He told the annual convention of the Canadian Construction Association that the key to unemployment relief lies with small business.

Wolfe said there is no need for a taxpayers' revolt and that the solution is control of government spending.

From the first day the Social Credit government took office it started a cost-cutting program, he said, and for 2½ years it has been stressing and practising spending restraint.

Graft Still Major Viet Issue

HOKOU, South China (Reuter) — Chinese refugees from Vietnam have told foreign correspondents visiting this border town that bribery and corruption in southern Vietnam is as rife as it was under the U.S.-backed Saigon government before the 1975 Communist victory.

Those interviewed made no mention of corruption in northern Vietnam. But the recurring theme among those from both north and south was of discrimination, abuse, persecution and property seizure by the Vietnamese authorities.

Some refugees said they bribed their way out of prison after being caught trying to flee southern Vietnam by boat, and that proper exit visas cost up to 20 ounces of gold, depending on the seniority of the official involved.

They said security police in Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon) ransacked the homes of overseas Chinese in search of gold and other valuables.

Chinese officials involved in refugee work—about 140,000 people have crossed into China from Vietnam in recent months—said Peking will grant exit visas to those with relatives or families in other countries willing to take them.

Chiang Yuan-feng, 25, a Chinese woman from Ho Chi Minh City, said she paid Communist officials there two ounces of gold for false travel documents to enable her to reach China.

Yun Chang-wang, an agricultural worker from southern Vietnam, said he paid 5,000 new dong (about $2,000) in bribes in Ho Chi Minh City for a travel pass.

Wang Pro-pi told the correspondents he had been a Communist party official in the city before becoming disgusted at the way northern Vietnamese were forcing their will on the south, and had handed over three ounces of gold for a pass to go north.

Miss Chiang said she had first tried to flee in May 1975, hoping to sail to Australia or reach Malaysia or Singapore. But she was caught and spent 13 days in prison writing confessions before her family bought her freedom with gold.

Some refugees said there was a reluctance among the Chinese in southern Vietnam to apply for permits to come to China.

"If you fill in the documents in the morning, you will be arrested that night," one said.

Spokeless wheel demonstrated

By FRED FERRETTI
New York Times

NEW YORK—Vincent Siano, who is an artist for Grumman Aviation, was explaining Tarot Tells, the game he and his friend Nicholas Piazza, a fuel oil company president, have devised.

"It does everything automatically," he said. "You press this button and it shuffles the Tarot cards and cuts them to the left three times as the principles of Tarot decree you must. Then you put your astrological sign and something of yourself — an earring, a business card — in these slots and your whole power is there, the power of you is in the machine. Your essence is inside, your spiritual being. This makes you ready for the nine cards on our Keltic Layboard. It's very, very deep, and all you need is a cheap Japanese motor."

Siano and Piazza were on the mezzanine floor of the Statler Hilton Hotel for the International Inventors Expo '78, a convocation of 178 inventors from around the world who have brought their dreams here so prospective manufacturers can look at them.

Siano thought he could have his Essence Machine marketed for about $40, and Charles Barbarow, a 31-year-old real estate salesman from Totowa, N.J., said that what the world needed now — since it had not yet zeroed in on his Moustache Styling Device — was his Par Four golf game, which combines lawn golf with Monopoly.

Arthur Lidov, a 61-year-old artist who lives outside of Poughkeepsie, brought his Insertable Spokeless Wheel, and hoped that somebody beside himself would see the merit of a wheel that did not need to be inflated, that ran on ball bearings, and that left space for a grocery carrier.

"It is impervious to flats," Lidov said.

Jecories Williams of New York City had the hit of the four-day show. He calls it his Protecto-Cane, and it is an anti-mugging device, concocted, Williams said, after "I saw too many street muggings."

It consists of a tube, aluminum or wood, to which is attached a smoke-alarm buzzer, a red pilot light and an umbrella handle. When a person is about to be mugged, he "might strike at the mugger with the cane," Williams said, but he might also move a tiny slide switch that activtes the light and the alarm, which shrieks like a banshee and cannot be turned off until the umbrella handle is unscrewed and a reset switch is pushed. Cost? "I can do it for $14," Williams said.

Newfie Bullet Revival On the Track

ST. JOHN'S (CP) — The Newfie Bullet may once again blow and puff her way from St. John's to Port aux Basques if Tourism Minister Jim Morgan has his way.

The possibility of reviving the abandoned passenger-train service as a tourist attraction was the subject of a recent meeting between local officials and Canadian National Railways.

The CN officials told Morgan the onus is on his department to show that travel by train could be sold to tourists.

Morgan said he thinks the Bullet would be a success and there is a real possibility it may once again operate, possibly in time for the 1979 tourist season.

The idea is to equip the Bullet with a number of passenger coaches and dining cars, with emphasis on Newfoundland foods, crafts and entertainment.

Tours would be taken from St. John's to points of historic or other interest. Morgan said the island's narrow-gauge railway, the only one still operating in Canada, would be a tourist drawing card.

The first passenger train crossed the province from St. John's to Port aux Basques about 80 years ago. The former Newfoundland Railway was taken over by CN at Confederation in 1949.

In July, 1969, the Bullet made its last run along the 547-mile route and CN replaced her with its Roadcruiser bus service. Today, 22 CN buses cross the province in a daily service connecting St. John's with the Nova Scotia ferry terminal in Port aux Basques. The buses carry some 200,000 passengers annually.

Fringes Don't Cut Absenteeism In B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A report on a survey of employee absenteeism in British Columbia said the most ambitious benefit plan will not alleviate the problem unless accompanied by changes to make the work place safe and pleasant.

The survey, conducted by Fred Mandl, assistant manager in manpower resources at CP Air, for the Industrial Relations Management Association, was answered by 140 corporate members of the association.

Mandl said 16 per cent of respondents reported they had cumulative sick leave-benefit plans and the majority of these said the plans were unsatisfactory in reducing absenteeism.

Companies with cumulative benefit plans and no other form of remedy had consistently worse records than other companies in combatting the problem.

Absenteeism was reported decreasing in only five per cent of respondent companies relying solely on cumulative benefit plans, but was decreasing in 13 per cent of companies with additional or other programs.

Mandl said many companies find the costs of absenteeism high.

A company with 2,000 employees and an absenteeism rate of 10 per cent can spend $4 million a year on the problem.

"You're talking about direct salary payment for work not being performed and you end up incurring overtime or salary costs for additional full- or part-time staff, which in turn incurs a whole host of administrative costs," Mandl said.

The cost to companies across Canada has been placed at more than $5 billion for 1977.

"Any decreasing absenteeism is in the larger companies," Mandl said. "They have the bigger problem and there is an increasing awareness of the problem."

He said many of the companies have developed anti-absenteeism strategies which include:

—Joint union-management programs to make the work-place safer or more pleasant;

—Discipline;

—Incentives such as sick-leave benefits, bonuses and non-monetary rewards of praise or opportunity for new and different work.

Mandl said there is a direct relationship between the level of concern in a company and the severity of the problem.

Twenty-six per cent of respondent companies whose management was "very concerned" about the problem reported decreasing absenteeism while three per cent of companies reported the same when their management was not too concerned.

And Now They Charge 25¢ for Air

By RALPH BLUMENTHAL
New York Times

NEW YORK — It was bound to happen. Iscella Holder of Peekskill, N.Y., drove into the Power Test gasoline station on Route 202 outside town the other day and stared at the unfamiliar machine mounted on the wall.

"AIR," it said, "4 minutes for 1 quarter."

"But," she protested, "I thought air was just — air."

Air is still air, but at a fast-growing number of service stations in the metropolitan area and other eastern U.S. cities, it is no longer free.

Increasingly, the familiar free air hose no longer provided as a courtesy for putting air in tires is being replaced by coin-operated air vending machines put out by the Nik-O-Lok Company of Indianapolis, which also invented the pay toilet.

The company installed the first air machine in Pittsburgh a year ago, and since then 500 more. The machines are equally distributed in the Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Detroit and New York areas. For reasons Nik-O-Lok executives say they do not quite understand, the machines have not really caught on so far west of the Mississippi.

Reaction has been mixed. Motorists encountering the devices for the first time have been amazed and sometimes outraged. At least one Long Island town may outlaw them. But station operators who have installed a machine say it has saved them headaches and money.

It costs an average station about $500 a year for electricity and maintenance to keep an air pump compressor going. The take from the so-called Coin-Air machines, split 50-50 with Nik-O-Lok, which installs them free, helps offset this overhead. (The company retains the option of pulling out the machine if its share falls below $20 a month.)

Still, many stations with pay-air machines continue to offer free air to regular customers and anyone who buys gas by turning off the coin-timer.

"They'd come in just to use the air pump and then they'd leave the hose lying around," said Tony Schepis, the Power Test attendant, trying to explain the situation to a skeptical Mrs. Holder near Peekskill.

"If you don't stop it lady," he kidded her, "we're going to charge you to breathe."

"I don't like it — I'm against it myself," said Vic Turselli, who said rising Consolidated Edison rates had compelled ~~him~~ to install a machine in his Amoco station in Hartsdale, N.Y. The final straw, he said, came during the heat wave last summer when one passer-by picked up the station's air hose and used it to "air-condition" the station's public telephone booth before stepping in to make a call.

"We had to do it in self defence," maintained Mickey Piesco, operator of a Mobil station in Manhattan. He said he put in the device a month ago after four motorists waiting for free air and another waiting to use the free rest room got into a fight.

But stations have traditionally provided such free services to customers and noncustomers alike. Why the refusal now?

As some operators tell it, with the spread of self-serve stations motorists increasingly patronize those for cheap gas and then drive into the full-service stations for air, toilets and other free facilities.

In fact, the proliferation of stations with Coin-Air machines is driving motorists who refuse to pay for air to the remaining free pumps.

"So that's why everyone's been coming here," said Richard Sanea, an attendant at a free-air Shell station in Peekskill, when told for the first time of the coin devices.

"They're a ripoff," he decided. "They're definitely a ripoff."

Nik-O-Lok defends the pay-air machines. "If you think air is free," said Martin Miller, the company's manager, "try blowing up a tire with your mouth. If it costs to put in a compressor, then it's not free to somebody."

Campfire Ban

The provincial government has banned campfires in northern B.C. because of extremely hazardous forest fire conditions.

The forests ministry said in a news release that the ban in the Prince George and Prince Rupert forest districts does not apply to provincial parks, provincial camping and picnic grounds that are adequately supervised, or to any municipal grounds.

U.S. STANDS VIGIL

Ginzburg, Shcharansky Trials Open

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet human rights activists Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg today went on trial 100 miles apart and each boldly proclaimed his innocence.

U.S. embassy officials, who were refused admittance to both trials, stood vigil outside each courtroom as a token of the serious concern the trials have aroused in the United States.

Shcharansky, a 30-year-old computer expert faces a possible death sentence on charges of spying for the United States — a charge personally denied by President Carter.

His brother, Leonid, reported Shcharansky told a Moscow court, "I cannot acknowledge any guilt. I consider the charges absurd."

Ginzburg, 41, and a founding father of modern Soviet dissent who has already spent seven years in prison, heard the charges of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda brought against him and emphatically denied any guilt.

When the court at Kaluga, 110 miles southwest of Moscow, routinely asked Ginzburg his nationality he replied, "Prisoner."

Leonid Shcharansky emerged from the People's Court of Moscow's Proletarsky District and said his brother had taken 17 months of solitary confinement very well indeed.

"He looked good and was self-confident," Leonid said.

Shcharansky pulled out a photograph of his exiled wife Avital, flashed it at his brother and smiled broadly.

Mrs. Irina Ginzburg came out of the Kaluga courtroom during a midday break and told reporters that 16 months in Kaluga Prison had made an old man of her husband.

"He feels and looks terrible," Mrs. Ginzburg said, adding, "He has gone completely gray-haired and looks like a 60-year-old."

Shcharansky immediately dismissed his court-appointed and KGB-cleared defence attorney, Silva Dubrovskaya, and told the court he would handle his own defence.

No Relief In Sight For Beer

The brewery shutdown in B.C. entered its second month during the weekend with no sign of a resumption of talks.

John Langley, business agent for the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers, said the union will continue with flying picket squads this week to prevent beer being shipped from the picketed breweries.

The pickets will follow trucks suspected of transporting beer from the plants.

Bob Binnendyk, vice-president and general manager of Labatt Brewery in B.C., said charges that beer is being shipped out of the shut down breweries were not true.

The lockout at five B.C. breweries — three in Greater Vancouver, one in Victoria and one in Creston — began June 8 after union workers at Carlings in Vancouver went on strike May 26.

The lockout affects 1,200 brewery workers, while hotels and neighbourhood pubs have laid off staff because of the beer shortage.

A New Computer You Can Talk To

NEW YORK (UPI) — Computer terminals which will respond to oral rather than written commands will be on the market in the United States next year, says a New York science research firm.

The first such system, called a speech recognition machine, is about to be installed for a commercial customer by Japan's NCE Corp., says Quantum Science Corp. It can recognize a spoken vocabulary of about 120 words.

Quantum Science, a multinational technological consulting firm based in New York, expects similar machines with recognition vocabularies of 50 words probably will be on the market next year in the United States priced to sell for $4,000 to $5,000.

A Quantum spokesman noted that the size of the initial vocabulary is not the most important index of a machine's value or quality; other considerattions may be more important.

A study by Quantum, one of a series of 10 the firm is producing on hardware of the future, concluded the long-term trend in man-machine communication will be to accommodate human rather than machine characteristics. Therefore, speech processing — speaker verification, speech recognition, speech synthesis — will be among the most significant new fields in information processing in the 1980s.

The speech processing computer terminals will save time in many businesses, Quantum said. They will be particularly valuable in aircraft traffic control.

NEW YORK (AP) — A man threatening to detonate what he said was 80 pounds of dynamite with a hand grenade and claiming to speak only Polish was holding four persons hostage in the World Trade Centre today, authorities said.

A police hostage negotiating team were talking to the man by telephone through a Polish interpreter, a spokesman said.

Times News Services

CHICAGO — Nazi leader Frank Collin stood atop a white van and spoke passionately of a "1978 white revolution" in which he said Jews and blacks would be "wiped off the face of the earth." There was no applause.

Collin, who denies the Jewishness of his own father, strutted on the top of the van and shouted to the crowd:

"I can't believe there was a holocaust. But if there was, they (Jews) deserved it. Just as they're going to deserve it this time."

Michael Allen, the leader of the National Socialist Party of America in St. Louis, spelled it out.

Of the Nazi massacre of Jews in Europe, he said, "This time we're going to finish the job."

Police say about 4,000 persons were looking on as Collin gave his "White Victory" speech.

Hundreds of policemen separated about 20 brown-uniformed Nazis and small bands of counter-demonstrators, whose shouts of "Death to Nazis" at times made it impossible to hear Collin.

Collin said there was a "minimum of violence" at Sunday's rally that left 62 persons arrested and seven injured. He said he wished police had stayed away so that Nazi supporters could have attacked the counter-demonstrators.

About 2,000 people were in the park and 3,000 others — mostly counter-demonstrators — were reported by police in the area. Most of those listening to Collin apeared to be on his side, but there was a strident group that attempted to drown out the Nazi speeches.

When it was over, bare-chested youths in the park seemed to want more and milled about for almost an hour in the muggy, 30-degree heat. A group of people wearing Jewish skull caps was chased until police came to their rescue. One of the few black youths venturing into the park was beaten. His clothes were torn from him before police could reach him.

Trading insults largely made up for breaking heads. Youths shook their fists in the faces of Jewish death camp survivors who gathered in the park. The

One Firm Won't Pay 97% Boost In Taxes

SURREY (CP) — A foundry business here is withholding about $15,000 in municipal taxes because it claims its taxes increased over 97 per cent this year under the new Assessment Amendment Act.

Sheila Barr, president of Robar Industries, said she sent letters to both Premier Bill Bennett and Mayor Bill Vogel in June stating she did not understand the increase in her taxes to $40,574 this year from $20,738 in 1977.

Barr said she has sent the municipality a cheque for the amount of her 1977 taxes plus an additional 20 per cent which, said Barr, is about $15,000 less than her assessment.

Barr said that since the road leading to her foundry is not paved and the company looks after its own garbage removal and pays for its own water supply, she saw no reason to pay the entire increase.

Municipal manager Dan Closkey said the increases to industry were high this year because a change in the assessment base resulted in industries being assessed at 30 per cent of their full value. He said also that many industries were under-assessed in the past.

RANSOM DEMANDS 'IMPOSSIBLE'

CAGLIARI, Sardinia (UPI) — An angry father has taken out an ad in two Sardinian newspapers telling the kidnappers of his son that their ransom demand is impossible to meet.

"My son is obviously worth a great deal to me, as yours are to you, but I will never be able to have him back if you persist in your absurd demands," wrote Franco Locci, whose 7-year-old son Luca was abducted June 24.

Luca's kidnappers asked $3.5 million for his release.

Locci told the bandits that if they pressed their demands, "I won't get my son back and you won't reap the fruits of your actions."

Sadat Plan Rejected

Times News Services

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat expressed "keen disappointment" today over Israel's rejection of the latest Egyptian peace proposals for the Middle East.

He was quoted by Egyptian Journalists as saying he feared the Israeli rejection could affect the outcome of next week's Israeli-Egyptian-U.S. foreign ministers' meeting in London.

Sadat spoke with a group of Egyptian reporters in his Vienna hotel suite following two meetings here Sunday with Israeli Opposition Labor Party leader Shimon Peres.

The Israeli cabinet agreed Sunday to send Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan to London but said Egyptian proposals made last week were "unacceptable to Israel and cannot, by their essence, lead to the achievement of peace in the Middle East."

At the meeting with Peres, Sadat said he would set aside the peace plan, if the Israelis were willing to discuss principles rather than details at next week's meeting, according to a spokesman for Peres.

The official agenda is to consist of the Egyptian peace plan and an Israeli plan that Egypt vetoed last December.

Peres' spokesman, Yossi Beilin, did not specify how far Sadat would be willing to let the Egyptian delegation depart from his proposals in London.

Sadat told a news conference before he met with Peres that a "dangerous situation" might arise if the London talks fail.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, following the five-hour cabinet session Sunday, said that Sadat's peace proposals, which call for Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, "cannot by their nature lead to the establishment of peace."

Cabinet Secretary Aryeh Naor said the ministers deliberately avoided a formal rejection of the Sadat plan and decided instead to brand it as "unacceptable" in order to assure that peace negotiations broken off last January could resume in London. Naor said the cabinet hoped that the foreign ministers' conference could start in a "positive mood."

SOME SNIPING MARS TRUCE IN BEIRUT

BEIRUT (UPI) — Sporadic sniper fire today disrupted traffic between Christian east Beirut and the Moslem west but a five-day truce held firm.

Syria said Israeli intervention in Lebanon could touch off a new Middle East war but a Lebanese newspaper said the United States had discounted any all-out Israeli-Syrian confrontation.

Bloodless Mauritania Coup

RABAT (UPI) — Left-leaning military officers seized power today in Mauritania and arrested President Moktar Ould Daddah in a bloodless coup that could have a major impact on the three-year guerrilla war in the former Spanish Sahara.

The military junta, which called itself the "Committee for National Rehabilitation," suspended the constitution and dissolved the 15-man cabinet, the parliament and the ruling People's Party, a radio communique monitored in neighboring Morocco said.

The junta said Ould Daddah's regime was toppled to "put an end to the anti-national and anti-popular corruption" of his government.

The statement was taken here as meaning the junta would be prepared to patch up relations with Algeria, which has been arming and training Polisario Front insurgents in Mauritania's and Morocco's mineral-rich portions of the Sahara desert.

Diplomats in Rabat said they had received reports indicating the junta was composed of left-leaning military officers resentful of the large influence held over their poor but strategic country by France and Morocco.

Sword and Sorcery at Sci-Fi Gathering

By JOSEPH McLELLAN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — You could tell right away that it was not one of your run-of-the-mill Washington conventions — particularly when you began reading the buttons (Dragonriders Have More Fun; Take a Wookie to Lunch Today; Darth Vader Is a Paramount Executive).

Or when you noticed the costumes — men in long, red-lined capes and bearing the sorcerer's staves; others in chain mail with swords four-feet long — some with extra-large handles because you needed both hands to swing them.

And one very husky fellow dressed like a medieval peasant, carrying a dangerous-looking battle-ax over one shoulder and, perched on his wrist, a no-kidding real, live falcon that surveyed the scene cooly, looking slightly bored.

The falcon seemed to be the only one with that attitude. Of the 1,202 humanoids who registered for Unicon IV, the three-day gathering that ended Sunday in suburban Maryland, some showed signs of hyperactivity, and as the weekend raced along a lot showed extreme fatigue. But there was no time for boredom.

They were too busy playing games with computers, admiring the science-fiction costumes of the more adventurous participants, watching films that ranged from Masque of the Red Death to Farenheit 451, pointing ray guns at one another and getting autographs from their favorite science-fiction authors.

Unicon (the name truncates and blends "university" and "convention") began four years ago as a small gathering of science-fiction fans at the University of Maryland and has been growing at what science-fiction fans would call an exponential rate. The first Unicon had 200 in attendance. Last year, after moving off the campus, it had 550 and this year that figure was more than doubled.

Part of the reason for this sudden growth could be seen in some of the costumes that, improbable as it once would have seemed, almost any American today would recognize: Darth Vader, Princess Leia and Chewbacca the Wookie, all from Star Wars — not to mention one of those little people in brown-hooded cloaks with luminous eyes who trundled around the desert peddling secondhand androids. Science fiction, in its mass-market film incarna-

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Sharp gains in energy issues sent the Toronto stock market moderately higher in active mid-afternoon trading.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 2.11 million shares compared with 2.87 million at the same time Friday.

Advances led declines 187 to 154 with 218 issues unchanged.

Ashland Oil Canada gained 1 to $30⅝, Noranda Mines A ¾ to $26¾, Canadian Occidental Petroleum ⅝ to $21½, Indal Ltd. ⅝ to $12 and Elks Stores Ltd. ½ to $13½.

Alberta Energy was down ½ to $16⅛, Canada Trustco Mortgage A ½ to $25½, Alberta Gas Trunk A ¼ to $14¼, Husky Oil ¼ to $43 and Thomson Newspapers A ⅛ to $14.

Roman Corp. rose ¾ to $26¾, Kerr Addison Mines A ⅝ to $11¼ and Camflo Mines ½ to $15½. Sherritt Gordon A fell ¼ to $5⅜ and Consolidated Canadian Faraday 15 cents to $3.40.

Prairie Oil Royalties climbed 1½ to $17½, Chieftain Development 1¼ to $21¼ and Amalgamated Bonanza Petroleum 1⅛ to $33⅞. Canadian Merrill declined ¾ to $19 and Canada Southern Petroleum ⅜ to $5.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were generally higher in moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Hudson's Bay Oil gained ¼ at $44¼, Ashland Oil ⅝ at $30⅜, Canadian Industries Ltd. ⅛ at $20¼, Royal Bank ⅛ at $32¼, Zeller's A ⅜ at $9 and Toronto Dominion Bank ⅛ at $19¾. Texasgulf lost ¼ at $20¼ and Alberta Gas Trunk Line A ⅛ at $14⅜. Among speculative issues, New Insco Mines advanced three cents to 48 cents on a volume of 5,000 shares traded.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices drifted around last week's closing levels in a listless mid-summer session.

Analysts noted that buyers had begun to move in last Thursday after a steady four-week decline in most issues.

Weakness in the dollar is presumed to dampen interest in the U.S. stock market among foreign investors, whose buying played a significant role in the strong rally on Wall Street this spring.

"The stock market in recent months has been highly sensitive to fluctuations in the value of the U.S. dollar relative to major foreign currencies," analysts at Standard and Poor's Corp. observed in the current issue of the firm's advisory publication.

Boeing climbed 1⅝ to $54¼ in active trading. British Airways ordered 19 Boeing 737 jets.

London

LONDON (CP) — An improvement in short-term economic indicators sent the London stock market sharply higher near the close of moderate trading. The Financial Times index was up nine points to 464.6 an hour before the close. Leading industrials gained widely, while gold issues moved higher with the bullion price. Canadian stocks were mixed.

Permits Increase

TORONTO (CP) — Building permits valued at a total $145 million were issued in Metropolitan Toronto last month, up from $74 million in May, 1977, A. E. LePage (Ontario) said. Value of permits issued from January to May totalled $412 million, down from $450 million during the five-month period a year ago.

Extension Granted Craigmont

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Craigmont Copper Mines Ltd. mine near Merritt in the southern Interior is expected to continue operating until the end of June next year, the company announced.

The mine still must shut down due to depletion of its copper ore reserves but the time estimate is five months longer than earlier forecast.

"The extension resulted largely from efficient operations for which the mine employees are to be congratulated," said mine manager Bill Diment, adding that the favorable exchange rate between the Canadian and United States dollar also contributed.

There now are about 300 workers at the mine.

DEEPSEA SHIPS

Albert Head — Xing Hai, grain ship.

Esquimalt — Hoegh Mascot, in for work.

Cowichan Bay — Ponderosa.

Crofton — Scapwill, Rondeggen, Dresden.

Alberni — Falcon Arrow, Everray.

Bay's Move Major Inroad For Credit Card Peddlers

WINNIPEG (CP) — An official of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce says inroads are being made into the last major holdout against bank credit cards — the department store.

Jack Wightman, the bank's vice-president of consumer finance, said it took about a year to work out a deal that provided for Hudson's Bay Co. to accept Master Charge and Chargex (Visa).

The Bay is accepting the bank credit cards from the beginning of July at its stores in Toronto, from the end of July in Winnipeg, Regina and Saskatoon, and across Canada by Aug. 8.

"I think it will just add to business," Wightman, who worked on the transaction, said in an interview. "I don't think it will hurt the house card at all."

He said other major department stores, Simpsons Ltd. and T. Eaton Co. Ltd., likely will be watching The Bay's performance for six months to a year before making any similar move.

"We've been talking for years to all the department stores," Wightman said. "The Bay finally just decided to come in. Department stores are the last major holdout."

He said banks don't even want to discuss the possibility of putting bank credit cards in food stores, an idea that has drawn strong opposition from consumer groups and governments.

"If someone can't afford food, it isn't going to help giving them credit to buy it," Wightman said.

A senior official of T. Eaton Co. Ltd. said his company, with headquarters in Toronto, will be taking another look at the possibility of using bank credit cards, but noted that Eaton's already has a credit card system of its own.

"We've considered that alternative off and on since the bank cards became a factor in retailing," the official said.

Wightman declined to say how much The Bay will be charged for sales made on the card, but said the charges will be more than made up in administration costs and covering bad debts.

Ian Ronald, vice-president of finance for The Bay, said the Winnipeg-based firm made the credit card move "purely as a convenience for our customers."

He said Master Charge and Chargex are considered "a supplement to, and definitely not a replacement of, our own card."

"We believe most customers will continue to want to have the total credit facility provided by a combination of bank and store cards," Ronald said. "The major focus will still be on our own card."

Alisdair McKichan, president of the Retail Council of Canada, said of the decision: "They (the banks) saw a chance to extend their customer base. That's obviously the purpose and intent of this move. It was inevitable, and someone had to do it first."

McKichan said department stores account for about 15 per cent of the $40 billion in retail business that is done every year across Canada.

Cash Offer Made

MONTREAL (CP) — Northern Telecom Ltd. of Montreal says it has notified DATA 100 Corp. of Minneapolis, Minn., that it intends to make a cash offer for all outstanding common shares of DATA 100 that it does not already own.

Northern Telecom said in a press release that the offer will be $19.25 U.S. a share. The company at present holds 1,585,645 shares, or about 30 per cent, of DATA 100's outstanding common shares.

Northern Telecom also announced the appointment of Palle Kiar, 51, as vice-president, customer development. He will be responsible for development of corporate marketing programs directed at users of the company's products.

Times Staff

British yachtsman and novelist Eric Hiscock is considered the modern-day version of his late countryman, C.S. Forester, who thrilled readers with the famous Hornblower series.

They stopped off in Tahiti and at Hilo in the Hawaiian Islands, making the final leg in 28 days.

Hiscock has just completed another book called Come Aboard, which describes their life in a trip from New Zealand to Britain and back to New Zealand.

The Hiscocks were married in 1941 during the Second World War. Hiscock had given up writing about his single-handed cruises to join the Royal Navy, first as chief engineer on a submarine chaser and later to serve in the Admiralty Ferry Service.

After the war the Hiscocks took to the sea in the 30-foot Wanderer III, probably the best-known cruising boat in the world.

The Hiscocks circumnavigated the world twice in the craft, which had only a four-horsepower motor, and were awarded te Cruising Club of America's Blue Water Medal for their achievements.

In the 11 years the Hiscocks have had Wanderer IV they have spent only five nights on land. That was when they were in South Africa and Hiscock was in demand for a lecture tour in Rhodesia.

Hiscock has lectured in Toronto but this is the first time he and his wife have seen western Canada.

They decided to head to this coast after making several Victoria friends during their wanderings. Among them are businessman Tom Denny and his wife, Margaret, and Stephen and Esther Dickinson of Van Isle Marina.

Hiscock was recently made an honorary member of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club in recognition of his accomplishments.

He turned 70 in March and though his eyesight is failing he still shoots noon sights of the sun while his wife shoots the stars when necessary.

Hiscock says if Canadian immigration officials agree, Wanderer IV will winter here at the Van Isle Marina so that the Hiscocks can explore the cruising waters of this area.

It may be Vancouver Island will be featured in the next book that comes off Hiscock's typewriter.

City to Enforce Nude Cover-Up

Victoria parks committee chairman Ald. Robin Blencoe said today he does not believe city council should designate part of Thetis Lake Park as a nude bathing area.

"I don't think it fits, yet," he said. "I am not prepared to recommend any change at this time."

Both Blencoe and city parks administrator Cliff Bate confirmed that parks department patrolmen and RCMP will enforce the prohibition against nudity in the bylaw governing Thetis Lake Park.

The comments came after about two dozen nude sunbathers at Prior Lake — a small lake northeast of Thetis with access from Highland Road — were warned by police Saturday that they would be prosecuted unless they covered up.

One member of the group later complained that they could not understand why they were being hassled, considering the remoteness of the spot and the apparent lack of complaints from other park users.

But Blencoe said the Prior Lake nudity is a constant subject for complaints from those who are offended by the activity.

"We have a bylaw and my problem is that I have to enforce that bylaw," he said.

Bate stressed that the lake is not as secluded as some of the naked fraternity claim. He noted it is adjacent to a well-travelled public road (Highland) and recalled that last year there were complaints that young men had been seen walking nude to their cars parked on the road.

"We are telling our people to enforce the bylaw. We are trying to control the activity before it gets out of hand," he added.

A Colwood RCMP spokesman said today no charges were laid as a result of the weekend incidents, and there have been no charges so far this summer.

He said the officer in question was visiting the area on his regular patrol, adding: "We're always in there."

Howard Society Praises New Prison Rules

John Howard Society Island board chairman Dr. Keith Jobson said today he is pleasantly surprised by new regulations for provincial correctional centres announced Friday by Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

Gardom said the changes will give prisoners' rights greater recognition and ensure prisoners will be dealt with in a fairer manner.

Jobson applauded the proposals, saying any introduction of change is usually met with resistance from within the system.

He said clarification and restructuring of of the disciplinary processes is an important step because present procedures are like "kangaroo courts."

Jobson said setting definitive standards for prisoner segregation and solitary confinement will make sure solitary is not abused.

"The grievance procedure is laughable and in desperate need of upgrading. Anything is bound to be an improvement."

Jobson said the tightening of all guidelines — leaving less possibility for interpretation on the part of prison staff — is very important because while staff may believe they are acting reasonably, discretion is crucial where people's rights are involved.

The new regulations are based on a five—year study.

Car Chase Nets Theft Charges

Two Saanich juveniles were charged with car theft today after an early-morning chase that started in the Broadmead area and ended at the corner of Royal Oak Drive and Cordova Bay Road.

Five police cars were involved in the pursuit after a vehicle failed to stop when waved over by a patrolling officer at 3:30 this morning.

After a short chase the car was abandoned by the two youths, aged 14 and 16, who fled into a wooded area. Saanich police soon apprehended them.

Weather Hinders Search

Bad weather is hampering an air search today for a light aircraft that developed engine trouble Sunday evening and crash-landed on a small unnamed lake 50 miles south of Williams Lake.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt said it is believed there were two persons aboard.

The spokesman said the pilot contacted a Canadian Pacific Airlines plane flying overhead to Vancouver and reported no one was injured.

A small RCMP Beaver craft from Kamloops is attempting to reach the area and a Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox will try to locate the downed plane as soon as the weather lifts.

Ferry Traffic on Rise

B.C. Ferries traffic in June was up significantly over the same month last year on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen and Horseshoe Bay-Departure Bay runs.

Conny Yzenbrandt, supervisor in the Crown corporation's traffic department, said today June's figures show the level of passenger and vehicle traffic is nearly back to what it was prior to the rate hikes of June, 1976.

She said traffic is still five per cent below what it was in June, 1975, but ferry officials expect that gap to be narrowed in the next two months when the effect of rate reductions in June, 1977, will be felt.

Passenger traffic out of Swartz Bay was up 18 per cent last month compared with June, 1977, and up 19 per cent out of Tsawwassen. The figures were 19½ and 16 per cent for Horseshoe Bay and Departure Bay respectively.

Vehicle traffic out of Tsawwassen in June was up 18½ per cent over last year and 16 per cent out of Swartz Bay. There were 18 per cent more vehicles out of Horseshoe Bay and 16 per cent more out of Departure Bay than the previous year.

Yzenbrandt said ferry officials feel the traffic levels are right on target. She added that the six to eight more sailings on the Swartz Bay-Tswawwassen run than in 1975 allow more people to be accommodated without having ferry overloads.

Luxury Wasted on Smallboat People

FROM OUR FRONT porch this morning, my wife and I watched a trim outboard cruiser roll down the highway on a trailer towed by a camper van. Until about half an hour earlier, that cruiser had been ours. Then it became the property of a Nanaimo couple who seemed as happy to acquire it as Win and I were to get rid of it.

Not that there's anything wrong with it in the way of hidden flaws or temperamental quirks. It's an honest boat, sturdily built of aluminum by one of this continent's most reputable manufacturers. The plain fact of the matter is that it was too good a boat for us.

For many years before we bought it, we'd got along happily enough with a second-hand plywood 12-footer. The Victoria carpenter who whacked it together from a "Popular Mechanics" plan had put it to hard use before he sold it to us for $125.

I treated it to comfortable new seats of yellow cedar, gave it a fresh coat of paint, and hung a low-horsepower outboard motor on its transom.

It never acquired the dignity of a name. Through the years, it remained simply "The Boat."

Our children graduated from grilse to salmon in it. More than once, we were caught out in it in weather that would have daunted a vessel twice its size. But it always brought us safely home.

As time passed, it began to show its age. Increasingly, its bottom became a patchwork of weathered plywood and marine filler compound. A gale plucked it off the lee-shore beach where we foolishly left it in a gamble with October weather and punched a hole in its side.

I patched it up and returned it to service for another batch of years. When we quitted Victoria, it came north with us on its trailer to new adventures.

In a maritime world given over to fibreglas and aluminum hulls, our boat became an interesting antique.

Tommy the resortman would load it carefully as an eggshell on to the cart that rattles down his little marine railway. When it slipped into the saltchuck — and stayed afloat — he would loose a sigh of relief.

"You know," he'd say, "you really ought to think of getting a new boat."

Then at a sportsmen's show last year, we fell for a smart new outboard cruiser. It had a windshield up front and a brawny motor behind, upholstered seats that flattened to provide beds for overnight trips, and a sure-enough steering wheel.

The salesman set up a demonstration. The cruiser proved to be fast, sweet to handle, and seakind. Enchanted, we bought it.

As proud new owners, we lost no time in launching out for a day's fishing.

"Oh boy," I crowed to my dear one as we shoved off. "No more squatting in the smokey end of an open boat hanging on to a blasted tiller."

We fished in cushioned luxury, our rods trolling from twin holders let into the sides well aft. But we didn't stay out very long, and I found Win curiously quiet on the drive home.

"Something the matter?" I asked her.

"No, no," she said. "Nothing at all."

Not until we had another trip under our belts did we arrive at the mutual truth.

We cranked the cruiser on to its trailer, and drove up off the launching ramp.

"I hate to say this," I told Win, "but I think we made a mistake."

"Me too," Win said. "It's a lovely boat, but nothing feels right. I can't curl up in the nose with a bag of potato chips."

I said, "I like to run a boat from the sternsheets, not jammed up forward behind a steering wheel."

Win said, "It seems all wrong, not being able to keep an eye on the rods." She considered, then said; "I guess luxury is wasted on us. We're smallboat people."

And to our profound relief, smallboat people we once again are. We can't get our old plywood boat back, more's the pity. But we hope to find a workhorse open job as much like it as possible.

Brush Fire Breakout In Saanich

A Saanich fire department official today urged area residents to be extremely cautious around wooded areas after brush flare-ups kept firefighters hopping Sunday.

A grass fire raced over open land at the corner of Quayle and Interurban Roads Sunday at 3 p.m. and while it was still smoking another blaze started on Peacock Hill about 5 p.m. The hill is in the middle of a residential section bounded by Cook, Maywood and Bellevue streets.

No houses were damaged in either fire.

"There have been several brush fires," said a fire department official. "The grass and everything is extremely dry and people should be reminded to use extreme caution. Of course all outside burning is forbidden."

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- This is not the time to resolve personal misunderstandings. Your less than even temperament may make matters worse.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- You are very sensitive of criticism. Recognize the spirit in which it is given and you'll benefit.

11-15 Positive Cycle- You'll be seeing blue skies even if it is raining. Don't bother to analyze — just enjoy!

Intellectually high? It doesn't guarantee a smooth business day. While business and financial matters are clear to you, others may find them confusing — and you may find that aggravating. Be patient with those who are not thinking as clear as you are. The day may come when the shoe is on the other foot.

Conflicts Trouble Many Adolescents

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Many adolescents live in a state of confusion and conflict. Some, in desperation, cry out for help. Others are not so fortunate and continue to bear a burden that devitalizes their energy and affects their happiness and scholastic achievement.

This letter, written by Miss D.C., represents the conflicts of post-adolescence and early adulthood. Parents who read it may be given new insight into the unexpressed fears and problems that besiege young people. Miss D.C. writes:

"Every morning I cry a little because I don't want to face another day with my struggle. I used to be an excellent tennis player. Now, I don't have the energy to be an excellent tennis player. Now, I don't have the energy to be alert and my body feels heavy and worn out. I find it hard to listen and can't concentrate on study. I am 19 years old and a sophomore at college.

"I began to drink and smoke marijuana. That didn't help me. I hate being a different person and no longer want to live. My future seems dim and hard. Night after night, I can't sleep. My parents believe I have "mono" and anemia, as it runs in my family. They think it's all due to the stress at school. But I believe I'm going through a deep depression.

"As I write, I feel a little better and I'm glad to be alive." — Miss D.C.

Dear Miss C.:

The key line in your letter is the last one. The fact that you are writing to me, a total stranger, is very significant. You are able to express the painful thoughts you have and, at the same time, maintain your anonymity. .

The simple process of expressing deep-seated, conflicting problems tends to clarify them and bring all aspects into proper perspective. That is exactly what you're doing. You now have proof that liberating one's thoughts is the first giant step towards one's eventual recovery from depression.

Well-meaning parents sometimes evade the reality that complex psychological behavior is not always due to inadequate rest, poor diet, too much activity or "mono" and anemia. Sometimes it is difficult for them to understand why a 19-year-old, attractive, privileged sophomore at college, with a "wonderful life ahead of her," should be so emotionally distressed and depressed. Consequently, these parents may resist facing the idea that emotional support from a professional outside source is necessary. On the other hand, parents who are enlightened to the benefits of psychological help do encourage their children to seek such counseling and therapy.

At your university there is an excellent psychological department. Just as you are able to express your feelings to me, you must do so to the counselors who will be assigned to you. You will find that, with their guidance, you will be given a newer insight into the reasons for your despair. When the veil is lifted, renewed confidence and happiness will replace your depression.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old woman keeping company with a 32-year-old man whom I've known for almost a year. (I'll call him Roland.) We are planning to marry as soon as he locates in a nearby city. (He's a professional person with a promising career.)

I have never been promiscuous, but I did succumb at age 16, and fortunately escaped becoming pregnant.

I became engaged at 20 and had a brief sexual relationship, but we broke up when I discovered that my fiance was a compulsive gambler.

My problem: Roland has never indicated by word or action that he would like to sleep with me. I would willingly agree, but I can't bring myself to lead the way. I am really concerned over his lack of interest in sex.

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: Have a frank talk with Roland. Ask him if he's indifferent about sex in general, or just with you. Also find out if he has refrained from mentioning the subject because he's saving himself until after the wedding — or, if, perchance, there's another reason.

DEAR ABBY: I am 12 years old, and my scout troop recently made a visit to a nursing home to cheer up the old folks there. We made some colorful paper flowers beforehand, and we sang some songs to entertain the old people.

Abby, you wouldn't believe how hungry those old folks were for company. The first lady I handed a flower to, gave it back to me, saying she didn't have any money to buy it. Then I told her it was free, and her face lit up and she took such a long time trying to decide which color to take. I got the feeling that she was trying to detain me just to have somebody to talk to for a while longer.

I can't tell you how much our visit was appreciated. When we drove off, we could see the folks looking through the windows and holding on to their paper flowers.

Please put something in your column to get people to visit their local nursing homes, whether they have somebody there or not. They are all somebody's grandmothers and grandfathers and they are human, too. — GIRL SCOUT

DEAR SCOUT: Bless you for writing. And those of you out there who are interested in visiting nursing homes to cheer up the residents should telephone first and make arrangements with the staff.

If you are more than ten pounds overweight, you should see your doctor to determine how much you should lose and how fast you should lose it.

The 10-page folder How To Eat Well And Grow Slim tells you how to lose weight safely. It urges you never to skip a meal and not to aim at losing more than one or two pounds a week.

The folder lists several food groups and the quantity per serving. For instance, in the protein rich foods group, one serving represents three ounces of hard cheese, or three medium eggs, or three ounces of cooked lean meat.

In the bread, cereal and pasta group, ⅓ cup of flaked or puffed cereal represents one serving, so do three small soda crackers, half an English muffin, half a large hamburger or hot dog roll.

The vegetable group lists many vegetables which may be eaten freely. Others are limited. For instance ¼ cup of baked beans is one serving, so is one small baked potato, one cup beets or one cup green peas.

To obtain the above-mentioned folder write to: Bakery Council of Canada, Box 61, Toronto-Dominion Centre, Toronto, Ont. M5K 1G5.
